Mountie Shot; 3 Held

SASKATOON (CP) — Constable Thomas Brian King, 40, a seven-year veteran of the RCMP, was slain early today and his body thrown into the South Saskatchewan River after he had stopped a vehicle on a routine highway check.

Police told a news conference that a third suspect had been apprehended in connection with the incident. They said earlier that two Saskatoon men had been taken into custody for questioning.

Police said the officer's weapon is missing.

An RCMP spokesman said one male suspect was arrested in the city and a second, who had fled on foot, was arrested by the RCMP at a roadblock about 5 a.m.

They released no details about the third suspect.

All three are expected to appear in court later today.

S.Sgt. Ron Lawford said earlier that police were first alerted when an abandoned RCMP cruiser was found in the early morning on Highway 11.

He said a constable apparently was shot after stopping a vehicle for a routine check on Highway 11 at 51st Street about 12:45 a.m.

King, who had been patrolling north of the city, had been alone in a marked police cruiser.

Police said he apparently had been driven from the highway area to the Queen Elizabeth power station, about six kilometres away, where he was shot and his body dumped in the river. The body was recovered a few hours after the police investigation began.

PROJECTS WORTH $5B POSTPONED

OTTAWA (CP) — Construction projects worth $5 billion had been postponed at the end of 1977 and another $1.1 billion of orders were cancelled outright, the president of the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada said Monday.

Donald Baldwin issued a statement blaming the situation primarily on the current economic climate as well as the postponement of government projects.

The institute's findings were based on a survey of 656 architectural firms across the country, representing about 60 per cent of the country's architects.

A total value of $9.98 billion of construction projects now are under way.

Building Trades Seek 15 Per Cent

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. construction workers will be demanding a 15 per cent pay hike and a 32-hour week, according to a spokesman for one of the unions bargaining as part of a construction industry joint council. The British Columbia and Yukon Building Trades Council will begin negotiating this week with the Construction Labor Relations Association on behalf of 35,000 members of 17 construction unions in the province.

This year is the first time negotiations have been conducted on an industry-wide basis. The plumbers union is the only union not included, but a plumbers' spokesman said Monday the demands being presented by the joint body are similar to those of his union.

An official of Local 919 of the cement masons union said his union wants the 15-per-cent wage increase, a two-per-cent increase in holiday pay and the 32-hour week. He said he could safely say all the other trades will want the same deal.

The construction industry negotiations will be the first major set of labor talks in B.C. since the expiration of federal wage and price controls.

"There has been rampant speculation," he said, adding that the real demands have yet to be presented.

CLRA president Chuck McVeigh said talks so far have involved only individual unions, and no joint demands have been made.

The construction unions are bargaining jointly as a result of a Labor Relations Board order last month. The LRB said a joint council was the best method to prevent a dispute with an individual union from crippling the entire industry.

Construction industry contracts expire April 30. The federal anti-inflation board twice rolled back wage increases gained in previous negotiations.

ICBC RECORDS A DEFICIT

The Insurance Corporation of B.C. recorded an $8.6 million deficit from operations last year, but is in a sound financial condition, Education Minister Pat McGeer said Monday.

The report said that in the last year alone, the average cost per bodily injury claim has increased by 47 per cent to $6,547 in 1977 from $4,454 in 1976.

He said that despite the operational deficit, B.C. drivers can look forward to continuation of safe driver discounts next year. Full details of the report appear on Page 7.

NEWS BRIEFS

Campbell Wins

CHARLOTTETOWN — The Liberal government of Premier Alex Campbell narrowly defeated the opposition Progressive Conservative opposition to win an unprecedented fourth term of office. See story on page 8.

BCR Decision

FORT NELSON (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett said Monday the government will make a decision on the future of B.C. Railway's Fort Nelson extension within the next six weeks. See story on page 15.

Mercury Danger

Dollar Rises

Commercial demand for Canadian dollars pushed the currency nearly a third-of-a-cent higher in quiet trading on New York money markets Monday and it remained marginally higher at noon today at 88.18 cents U.S.

Stocks Boom

Skylab Lives

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Skylab, the 85-ton space station abandoned four years ago, came back to life Monday. The spacecraft began charging four of its solar-powered batteries in response to a command from flight controllers to slow its fall from orbit.

Dayan Off to U.S., But No New Ideas

TEL AVIV (Reuter) — Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan left for Washington today, saying he was not taking any new ideas or proposals for a Middle East settlement with him.

Speaking to reporters before his departure, Dayan expressed strong opposition to the proposed sale of U.S. fighter planes to Saudi Arabia and Egypt as part of a package deal that includes sales of planes to Israel.

"I feel it is our right to express our opinion that the sale of these warplanes to Saudi Arabia and Egypt will endanger Israel and think the United States has adopted a wrong attitude in this matter," the foreign minister said.

He said Israel believes the United States must adhere to earlier promises to supply Israel with planes without linking their sale to Saudi Arabia and Egypt.

"If they will punish us because of our objections, then we must accept that, but the American attitude is absolutely wrong," Dayan said.

Meanwhile, U.S. special envoy Alfred Atherton is returning home with a message from President Anwar Sadat of Egypt to President Carter but without any new Egyptian proposals for resuming Middle East peace talks.

In Washington, President Carter today requested nearly $2 billion in economic-related security assistance for key countries in the Middle East, Africa and the eastern Mediterranean — most of it for Egypt and Israel.

The bulk of the request, over $1.5 billion, is to help the economies of Israel ($785 million) and Egypt ($750 million) because "the pursuit of peace and of economic progress are intertwined," Harold Saunders, assistant secretary of State for Near Eastern Affairs, told a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee.

NOT DOWN-UP is the heading of a skier using an Uphill Racer, a parachute with steering bar attached developed by a Swiss engineer. The handy device which takes the place of lifts, tows and two-legged climbing, sells for about $800, and could be something for new year.

Ottawa 'Bureaucracy' Delaying Ogden Point

Westcan Terminals president Hershell Smith said today Ottawa has not forwarded a single dollar for the Ogden Point reconstruction program and there is no way the project can be completed on schedule.

He said bureaucratic delays have resulted in two things:

—The pulp shed which would employ between 80 and 100 people is still unfinished and workers cannot be hired — a serious problem in view of Victoria's unemployment rate.

—The facilities to receive cruise ship passengers will not be finished by June as scheduled, meaning there will be no dock facilities for passengers this summer.

Smith called a news conference at Westcan Terminals this morning to protest the costly delays in getting Ottawa to live up to its pledge, announced Dec. 23, to raise and improve the dock and to install services such as water and lights.

"We have lived up to our part of the bargain," he said.

"But nothing has been forthcoming from Ottawa."

A ministry of transport proposal to spend $1.25 million on the dock has gone to cabinet but has not yet been approved, he said.

He said he has asked the Victoria Chamber of Commerce, Mayor Mike Young and the provincial government to ask Ottawa to move on its commitments.

Smith said he is confident the money will be forthcoming but each week of delay is costly to the city.

Westcan has already built the walls of a pulp shed at the Ogden Point dock at a cost of $350,000. But the floor can not be constructed until Ottawa raises and improves the dock.

Tenders were to have been called May 9 but this has now been delayed until May 23, he said.

FEW JOBS BEGGING

OTTAWA (UPI) — Canada's more than one million unemployed had a daily average of only 37,800 unfilled jobs to chose from during the first three months of this year, Statistics Canada reported today. The preliminary estimate showed the number of job vacancies was 6 per cent higher than during the last three months of 1977 but was 5 per cent, or 1,900 jobs, lower than during the same period a year earlier.

AIRPORTS 'HAZARDOUS'

OTTAWA (CP) — A Conservative MP Monday night released a government memorandum saying pilots are taking off and landing at airports in violation of safety rules because they know the transport ministry can or will do little about it.

"Alleged breaches of air regulations are becoming so common that with the limited staff and equipment available all but recurrent and obviously hazardous situations must be overlooked," says the report released by Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg South Centre).

Air Route Mulled

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — The Civil Aeronautics Board has agreed to consider a plan by Northwest Airlines to begin an air route between Spokane and Vancouver, the Spokane Area Chamber of Commerce said Monday.

Sun Life Move Okayed

TORONTO (CP) — Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada policyholders voted overwhelmingly today to move the company's head office to Toronto from Montreal.

The vote, including policyholder proxies, was more than 83 per cent in favor of the move.

The vote percentage was given in an interim report by the scrutineers at the meeting, attended by about 800 participating policyholders. The complete breakdown was to be released later at the meeting.

A last-ditch attempt by the federal government and a group headed by Montreal lawyer Richard Holden failed to prevent the move, first announced in January by Sun Life president Thomas Galt.

The federal government, a policyholder, announced Monday it was voting against the proposed move and urged other policyholders to do likewise.

Holden had tried unsuccessfully to obtain an Ontario Supreme Court injunction to have today's meeting delayed for six months.

Holden said after the meeting that the action before the Ontario courts seeking to invalidate the move "will be in limbo for a while and could be activated at any time if the company acts against its formal declaration that the move is only a paper move."

NO RCMP SLAPS

TORONTO (CP) — Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais says in an interview with the Globe and Mail that he is planning no disciplinary action against senior RCMP officials who have authorized break-ins without warrants, illegal mail openings, issuance of phoney comuniques and other activities. See also Page 40.

Blais also says the federal government knew last September of about 400 RCMP break-ins without warrants, made public last week in testimony before a federal commissioin led by Mr. Justice David C. McDonald.

Blais says in the interview he does not think the reputations of RCMP officials have been tarnished and that internal shake-ups are not necessary.

He says the government instructed the force to stop the break-ins without warrants and that he is satisfied with that until the commission reports in 1980 or 1981.

Disciplinary measures and other changes in the force will be considered then, the solicitor-general says.

The break-ins without warrants were not individual acts but procedures approved by the force itself, Blais says.

Goyer's Tab Likely Stuck On Taxpayers

OTTAWA (FP) — Unless an appeal is launched, Canadian taxpayers will cover the $10,000 damages awarded a senior public servant in his libel action against Supply and Services Minister Jean-Pierre Goyer, Justice Minister Ron Basford told the Commons Monday.

"In line with a number of precedents," Basford said, "the Crown acted for the defendant (Goyer) in that case on the basis of past experience and past practice."

GORY FREE-FOR-ALL ERUPTS OVER MORO

ROME (UPI) — Police firing tear gas Tuesday broke up a bloody free-for-all in downtown Rome between 4,000 youths denouncing Red Brigades terrorists and a gang of extremists gleefully taunting them by chanting "Aldo Moro is no more."

As the entire nation awaited word on the fate of the soft-spoken Moro, President Giovanni Leone marked celebration of the 33rd anniversary of Italy's uprising against the Nazis and Fascists by condemning the "perfidious menace" of terrorism and calling for "faith in humanity's ability to overcome barbarity."

Extremist infiltrators at the tail end of the youth march shouting pro-terrorist slogans.

Meanwhile, a flurry of anonymous telephone calls announcing that Moro had been killed by his Red Brigades kidnappers was received today by the Italian news agency ANSA.

'Nosy Parker' Loses Suit

VANCOUVER (CP) — A census-taker described by the judge as a "nosy Parker" was denied damages Monday in B. C. Supreme Court for a broken wrist suffered in a fall while calling at a Duncan home.

The federal government sued the homeowner, Mrs. Diane Joan McKay, after census-taker Mrs. Marjorie Haley, 63, tripped on a piece of plywood and injured her wrist in June, 1976.

Justice Kirke Smith said the census-taker first went to the back door to pick up a completed form, then to the front door, but got no answer because the family was not at home.

"Mrs. Haley, however, was not content to accept the fact the house was empty," Justice Smith said. "She was being paid per house call, with no mileage allowance, and understandably was determined to make this her only call to the house."

Mrs. Haley decided to see if there was an occupant in the back garden, went along a path, tripped on a piece of plywood which she described as greasy, and suffered the wrist injury.

Justice Smith said Mrs. McKay had taken reasonable steps to ensure her one-acre property was safe, and the census-taker had exceeded her area of so-called invitation.

"The danger, if danger there was, was obvious," Justice Smith said. "Mrs. Haley had no business canvassing the whole property to avoid a call-back, and as a 'nosy Parker' her unfortunate injuries and its consequences are not matters for which she can here claim relief."

SCHOOL BOARD REJECTS SUMMER STUDENT WORK

The Greater Victoria school district won't hire any students this summer because it has decided not to comply with a union demand to provide the workers with scale wages.

The demand was made by two locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

The two CUPE locals refused to accept the school board's applications to hire 43 students under the Provincial Youth Employment Program (PYEP) this summer unless they were paid union wages of $5.95 an hour plus six per cent holiday pay.

The board planned to create 13 projects that would pay nine university students $3.20 an hour and 30 high school students $3 an hour. Their wages would be supplied by PYEP.

But CUPE locals 382 and 947, covering inside and outside non-teaching staff, turned down all but one of the projects unless the students were paid union wages.

The board decided not to apply for PYEP funds this year.

THE OUTCASTS by Ben Wicks

Dam Row back in Court

The multi-million-dollar dispute between British Columbia Hydro and the builders of the W. A. C. Bennett Dam — Canada's longest civil trial — was sent back to the B.C. Supreme Court Monday by the provincial appeals court.

The appeal court's 145-page judgment said the $36 million which Hydro was ordered to pay a consortium of five contractors was wrongly awarded on a work-done basis and that individual damage claims under the contract must be heard.

The Supreme Court already has heard 409 days of testimony and legal argument about construction of the dam on the Peace River.

The companies were awarded $36 million in November, 1975, and at that time the trial of 120 claims under the contract had not been completed.

Hydro appealed and after a 44-day hearing the appeal court threw out the earlier decision of Justice James Macdonald, rejecting the companies' argument for a cost-plus settlement.

Justices Peter Seaton, W. R. MacIntyre and A. B. Carrothers said that an injustice had been worked on the contractors because substantial sums that ought to have been paid a decade ago were not paid yet.

But they added that the contractors in 1972 chose to divert the legal proceedings from their normal course and that they must have weighed the risks and decided that a total cost recovery made the risks acceptable.

Hydro didn't score a clear-cut victory, however. The judges said Hydro should now meet the obligations incurred 10 years ago and pay what it owes the companies.

The judges said a fair settlement would be the contract price, money for additional work and full amounts for any breaches of contract.

Meanwhile, it was announced Monday that a legislative sub-committee plans a public hearing on questions concerning B.C. Hydro.

Elwood Veitch, chairman of the legislature's committee on Crown corporations, made the announcement after NDP leader Dave Barrett accused Finance Minister Evan Wolfe of being manipulative and evasive by referring the questions on Hydro activities to Veitch's committee.

Barrett made his remarks during debate on the budget estimates of the finance ministry, and was referring to a list of approximately 50 questions, asked by two Vancouver Province reporters, which they said B.C. Hydro officials refused to answer.

Interim Injunction Bars Arctic Mining

OTTAWA (CP) — The Federal Court of Canada granted an interim injunction Monday blocking federal plans to allow mining and related development covering an area of about 70,000 square kilometres (30,000 square miles) in the area of Baker Lake in the Northwest Territories.

Mr. Justice Patrick Mahoney's order came after a four-day hearing last week in Toronto during which Inuit residents of Baker Lake said proposed mining development near their hamlet would drive off the caribou herds on which they rely for food.

Following the hearings Friday, Mr. Justice Mahoney granted a temporary injunction until he considered the Inuit motion for an interim injunction.

David Estrin, lawyer for Baker Lake council, which launched the civil suit, said he believes is it the first time native people in the Northwest Territories have taken action against the federal government based on aboriginal rights.

"The Inuit are pleased that the court has recognized the serious nature of the conflict," Estrin said in a telephone interview from his home near Guelph, Ont.

He said the injunction will be in effect until the main legal action, a claim for a permanent injunction, gets under way.

Estrin said it might be as early as six months and as long as a year before the main civil suit begins.

Aubrey Golden, who also represents Baker Lake council, said in Toronto the injunction bans the federal government from issuing prospecting permits, land-use permits, mining leases or recording mining claims within 4.8 kilometres of any major river crossings used by caribou in the Baker Lake area.

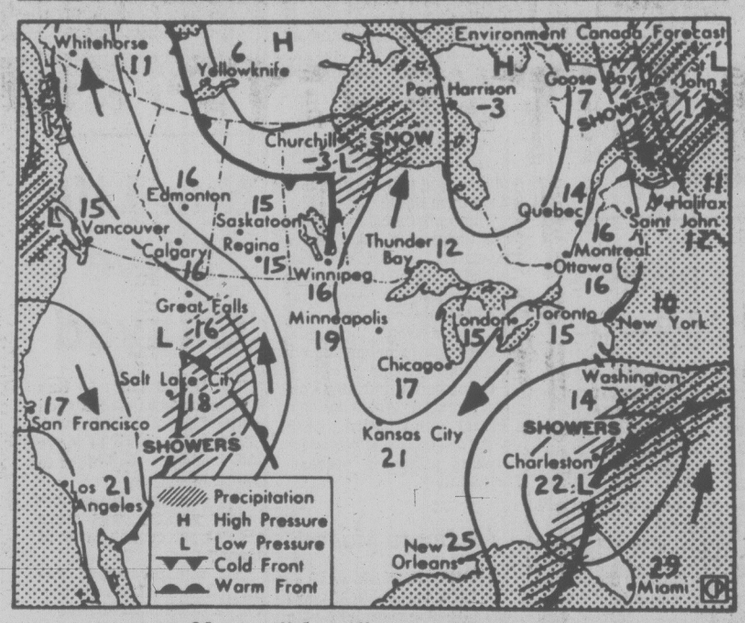

Map valid until noon Wednesday

Clouds covered the coast and parts of interior overnight as a Pacific disturbance offshore edges slowly eastward. The system will weaken as it continues across the province. Thus only a little light rain or showers are anticipated today, with most of the acitivity confined to the coast. Another frontal system moving through the Gulf of Alaska will spread more rain to the northern B.C. coast Wednesday. This new disturbance will also weaken, resulting in only a few patches of clouds across the remainder of the province with a few showers over the south coast late Wednesday.

ENVIRONMENT CANADA WEATHER OFFICE 10 A.M. FORECASTS Valid Until Midnight Wednesday

Greater Victoria: Cloudy. A few periods of light rain. Wednesday mostly cloudy. A few showers in the evening. Highs both days 14 to 16. Lows tonight near 5.

Lower Mainland, East Vancouver Island: Cloudy with a few periods of light rain. Wednesday mostly cloudy. A few showers in the evening. Highs both days 14 to 16. Lows tonight near 4 to 6.

North and West Vancouver Island: Cloudy. A few periods of rain. Wednesday cloudy. Occasional rain beginning northern sections during the afternoon and spreading slowly southward. Highs both days 12 to 15. Lows tonight 4 to 6.

TORY THREAT 'TO BLOW'

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservatives may reveal full details of investigations into commerical deals between the governments of Canada and Iran if the government continues to claim confidentiality about them, Allan Lawrence (PC-Northumberland Durham) said Monday.

"We'll have to decide whether we're going to blow the lid on this ourselves," Lawrence told reporters after Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais confirmed an RCMP investigation into "Project Iran" is under way but refused to reveal details.

Project Iran was an office established in the department of supply and services to administer the sales and purchase of Canadian military, electronics and other products under a $100 million line-of-credit agreement signed by Iran and the Export Development Corp. (EDC) in 1971.

Lawrence said the RCMP is investigating agent's fees and commissionns paid in the course of sales by Canadian companies to Iran, with the EDC acting as middle-man.

WATER PIPE BIDS OPENED

Standard General Construction (B.C.) Ltd., Richmond, $222,195; Alberni Excavation, division of Dura, Saanichton, $226,834.75; H.B. Contracting Ltd., Surrey, $264,706.25; G.W. Carlson Construction Ltd., Nanaimo, $335,774.

SEARCH ON FOR COPTER

Two Labrador helicopters and two Buffalo aircraft from CFB Comox resumed the search today for a helicopter with two men aboard missing since Friday on a flight from Delta to Queen Charlotte City.

Missing are the pilot, David Steel, 35, of Mission, and Keith Humpherville, 38, owner of the helicopter and a resident of Queen Charlotte City.

. . . And Now the Knees

By FRANK RUTTER
Times London Bureau

LONDON — There has been some question, on national television, of whether it is the news, or the knees, at nine.

The public and private television networks have both got women reading the night news.

And if the British Broadcasting Corporation and Independent Television News are not competing — which they deny they are — it is a remarkable coincidence.

Angela Rippon reads for the BBC.

Anna Ford for ITN.

Angela Rippon was first, and doing a sober and unremarked job until her torrid dance number in tights on the Morecambe and Wise Christmas comedy special in 1976.

Her career just took off after that.

Rippon showed her legs again and ITN hired Anna Ford.

After a crash training program, which included a trip to New York to see how Barbara Walters did it, Ford suddenly appeared, unannounced, one day reading the one p.m. news.

Her debut on the peak viewing night news came just over a week ago. It was also unheralded, which is the way ITN wanted it. This gave the private news operators the chance to downplay the impact of Ford on their ratings, which haven't been calculated yet, and won't be for another week, an ITN publicity official said.

"Believe it or not, we have tried to play this thing down," said the official.

Most people do not believe it.

The newspapers have had a field day. The Sun carried a centrefold spread, with a scoreboard rating "sex appeal"— Anna fifteen, Angela, ten — clothes, face, hair and voice.

Woodworkers Return to Job

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — The 1,400 members of International Woodworkers of America local 1-85, off the job since last Wednesday at MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. operations, returned to work Monday.

The union meanwhile filed an affadavit asking the Labor Relations Board to reconsider a cease-and-desist order issued Friday.

The dispute began with suspension of five workers Tuesday at the company's Shoemaker Bay sorting grounds. The company would only say the workers were suspended for slowing down the operation there.

REFORESTRATION URGED

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The international president of the International Woodworkers of America (IWA) says governments in the Pacific Northwest are not doing their jobs to assure raw material supplies for the future.

Keith Johnson, attending Local 1-424's annual convention, said Saturday that reforestation to maintain sustained yield and preserve jobs is the most important problem facing members of the giant forest union.

He said this was of particular concern in the northwest areas of Canada and the United States.

"These raw materials are essential for the survival of the industry," Johnson said.

The convention was an off-year meeting without election of officers. The only emergency resolution was made by delegates from the Fort Nelson-Fort St. John area calling for continuation of B. C. Railway service to those communities.

Missile Hit Jet

LONDON (AFP) — The South Korean airliner which crash-landed on a frozen lake near Murmansk last week was forced down by a missile fired from a fighter plane on direct orders from Moscow, The Daily Telegraph reports.

A special correspondent, quoting an unidentified senior Norwegian officer attached to NATO, said the missile of an unknown type apparently exploded some distance from the Boeing 707, which was damaged by flying fragments.

The correspondent said the officer drew this conclusion based on observations taken at the time by NATO radar on the Soviet-Norwegian frontier.

Potty Protest By Ulster Inmates

BELFAST (Reuter) — Nearly 300 convicted Irish terrorists have stopped using prison toilets here as part of their campaign for political status, British authorities say.

The authorities say some cells in newly-built blocks at the Maze Prison are already filthy but deny claims that there is a risk of epidemic.

The men have been refusing to wear prison clothes since political status was withdrawn in March, 1976, and live naked except when dressed in prison blankets.

They now are using chamber pots which they refuse to empty themselves.

An Election Now

Federal NDP leader Ed Broadbent is quite right when he urges Prime Minister Trudeau to call a federal election immediately and have done with it.

Broadbent said last weekend that it is too late now for Trudeau to delay an election further since he has cranked up the election machinery and the public is ready. He is correct on both counts, but has missed an even more important point — that the politicians, especially the politicians of the Trudeau government, are more than ready.

Indeed the politicians have been ready for six months or longer, and for at least three the main part of their attention has been focussed on election preparation rather than on governing the nation. In numerous instances, not the least of which was the recent agreement with the provinces to lower the sales tax, the aim has been to do and say something politically popular, whether or not it will really provide any significant benefits to the country.

At the same time the government has been unwilling to involve itself in long-term projects since it knows it may or may not be around to follow through in another few months.

All of this is quite understandable. But it is not necessarily in the best interests of the country.

The serious problems of Canada — the falling dollar, the rising unemployment rate, inflation after controls, issues of national unity and federal-provincial relations — need to be dealt with by a government making decisions on the merits of the issues, not on politicial expediency. They need also to be dealt with by a government that knows it will be in power long enough to carry through programs that may take months or years to come to fruition.

A caretaker government, which is really all the Trudeau government now is, is not good enough. But it is unrealistic to expect anything else from a government that knows its next election is weeks or, at the most, a few months away.

The only solution is for Trudeau to stop teasing the public with election threats and announce a date for the vote. If that is done, a new government — Liberal or otherwise — can take office within two months knowing it has a mandate from the Canadian people to make the tough decisions that will probably be necessary to try to solve some of the country's problems.

Who's Running Post Office?

Ah, the wonderful, wacky ways of the Canadian post office. Its service deteriorating, prices rising 15 and 20 per cent at a whack every six months, a current deficit of nearly $600 million — and what is the post office studying?

Plans to cut service even further, of course. A study of Vancouver's postal problems that was leaked to the press and confirmed by the post office states that a possibility for the long term is mail delivery only three days a week.

Other great ideas from the same people who brought you "guaranteed next day delivery," killed Saturday home delivery years ago and electronic sorting that isn't any better than the manual variety include:

Rural-type mail delivery in the cities. The postman would deposit your correspondence in a mailbox at the sidewalk, saving him a few steps to your front door.

"Kiosk delivery" to all new areas and to large apartment complexes. That means the mail would be dropped at a central spot and people would trek from near and far to pick it up.

Reduction of staff, reduction of the number of mail deliveries to the Vancouver airport (for airmail delivery to other points) to three a day from 17 now and no afternoon deliveries of mail to various postal stations in the city.

These are such wonderful self-defeating, self-fulfilling prophecies. Only some hack promoted so far beyond his level of competence and away from the real world of getting the mails through could seriously propose that the solution to the post office's problems of continuing deficits, slow service, recalcitrant unions is to make service even slower, get rid of staff and generally discourage people from mailing letters.

The problem came into focus for us after reading of two people's experiences with the electronic sorting machines, which were supposed to be the post office's salvation. A Toronto man found that any denomination of stamp works on a first class letter. He stuck on stamps ranging from one cent to 13 cents and all the letters were delivered to him.

A Vancouver reporter did something similar, to test a Vancouverite's assertion that mail with no stamps at all is delivered by the post office. She tested the electronic whiz and sure enough, everything was delivered — envelopes with the correct postage, no postage, with bits of fluorescent tape where the stamp should be, even one with the cryptic initials FQEF.

Holocaust

The NBC special Holocaust, which portrayed the systematic destruction of six million Jews by Nazi Germany during the Second World War, has aroused much controversy. Here, three letter-writers have their say.

HOLOCAUST FAMILY: Actors (l to r) Fritz Weaver, Rosemary Harris, Blanche Baker and James Woods portrayed the Weiss family in TV program

One Who Lived

Please grant space to me in your paper to rebut the leader of a German-Canadian group who protested the showing of the movie Holocaust (Holocaust Protest; Times, April 15).

Being one of many who were uprooted during the Nazi invasion of Poland, I was, however, successful in escaping from the country and thereby missed the many inhuman acts that were administered in the names of Nazi racial superiority.

Firstly, I must ask Herr Zundel would he have wanted his children to become addicted to those and similar doctrines as outlined and practised in the Hitler Jugend (Hitler youth movement)?

Secondly, I question whether or not Herr Zundel fully realizes the beauty and freedom that is prevalent here in Canada. Under the Third Reich was there any opportunity to protest the Nazi movement? Of course not, yet a legitimate and orderly procession of protestors here in Canada can express their opinions on many matters including both political and discriminating legislation that may infringe on their rights.

Herr Zundel expresses his opinion that 30 years is long enough to recall the unfortunate events of the past, but I ask him this question, just compare the short 30 years of time against the 1,000 years that the Nazis proclaimed the world would have to enjoy the glory and propaganda that was the Nazi race superiority.

Believe you me, Ernst Zundel, the film Holocaust is not as nightmarish as the actual reality that existed under the Nazi regime in Germany. The film, in my opinion should be shown in Germany, where at present race hate still exists and causes much concern. — Henry J. Szmuniewski, Malahat P.O.

Forgive? Forget?

The statement by Simon Wiesenthal in the press that the Canadian government is not showing even minimal cooperation in bringing to justice Nazi war criminals living in our country comes as no surprise; it is nonetheless disgusting. Inaction is helping to undermine the principle of personal responsibility which is inextricably tied to that of personal freedom and which, together, form a basic premise of society.

People whose thinking has been systematically muddled by poor theology and poorer sociology believe that one ought to "forgive and forget" since so much time has elapsed, since nothing can bring back the victims, since the criminals are old and near death, and since, it is alleged, they are regretful and reformed.

Not even the resurrected victims of these horrendous crimes would have the right to forgive any more than the victims of any crime can judicially do so. It is the state representing society which brings actions against criminals not the victims or their survivors. Genocide is a crime against God and it is a presumption to prompt God to forgive, and a blasphemy to attempt to expropriate her prerogative. Statutes of limitation have nothing to do with any benign assumptions about time mellowing an alleged criminal; they simply have to do with the effectiveness of the legal process.

As for regret — how does one measure that? Only the criminal knows if he is truly regretful and a necessary aspect of his repentance is the acceptance of the punishment he is experiencing (or should experience) for his act.

Governments would like very much to confine the concept of personal responsibility, as strengthening it could weaken their authority. People could refuse to follow orders. Canada is just participating in an unarticulated international conspiracy based on mutual accommodation for self-interest. The Nuremberg trials were exceptions necessitated by the still fresh outrage of the postwar world.

As for "orders," all choices are made under specific circumstances, and all acts involve choice. Recognition of these circumstances would be appropriate in any tribunal trying Nazi war criminals but recognizing the existence of circumstances does not preclude guilt or the necessity for a trial.

Denying that every one of these criminals made a series of choices which led to unspeakable sins is a contagious concept, a plague of which would propel us into barbarism. — E. Kaellis, 1291 Gladstone Avenue.

The Real Enemy

In reply to the German group's protest at the showing of Holocaust on television, it is very necessary that it should be shown so that we may never forget what happened over 30 years ago, and to combat apathy or indifference to suffering!

On the other hand, it would be wrong to use this film to stir up anti-German hatred, as the real enemy is totalitarianism rather than any one particular nation. (Incidentally, the local fascists were far more brutal than their German counterparts, especially the Croatian Ustasha, the Latvian and Ukrainian fascists and the French Milice.) While it is true that the Germans en masse, as a nation, have a militaristic tradition and a tendency towards brutality and unquestioning obedience to orders whether right or wrong, Nazism is not simply "militarism with bad manners," but something of demonic origin, something apart. It has even been described as "un-German" in some German circles.

However, mass murder did not end with the collapse of the Nazi powers in 1945. The French used it in Algeria in the 1950s, the Chinese Communists liquidated three million or thereabouts, also in the 1950s. During the 1960s, 250,000 people were liquidated in Indonesia and in the 1970s some 250,000 to 500,000 were massacred in Bangladesh, one million liquidated in Cambodia since the Reds took over and from 150,000 to 250,000 have been murdered in a most revolting manner in Uganda since Idi Amin came to power.

So we see that this sort of thing could happen in any country if the wrong people got into power, not only Germany.

It has been well said that the price of liberty is eternal vigilance. Holocaust is part of that vigilance! — Richard D. Corrance, 710 Cormorant Street.

Library Fumble

An open letter sent to the municipal governments of Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt:

Plans for the move of the Greater Victoria public library to the newest provincial government complex at Blanshard and Broughton Streets is committing millions of municipal taxpayers' dollars without public approval.

Nor has the public ever been informed of costs for a technical expert, architect, transference, lawyers, hardware, cosmetics and physical changes over the 10-year lease period.

When the central library plan was first presented to the municipalities, Saanich council voted 5-to-4 to approve in principle. Esquimalt gave approval with misgivings and a few members of Victoria city council protested but finally were sold a bill of goods. Oak Bay voted in favor, knowing the need for new library facilities. The proposition was presented to the library board as "accept or do without."

The Crystal Gardens, situated near the provincial museum, were ideal for an updated central library on municipally-owned ground. The exterior and areas of the interior could have retained enough of the past to satisfy those admirers of nostalgia.

What government is doing is playing a game of Monopoly with taxpayers' money. If you, as municipal representatives, many of whom will not be in public office 10 years hence, agree to the new cenral library locale without an in-depth investigation into the political and financial machinations, you will be passing on your responsibilities to others when the 10-year lease is concluded. — Maggi Lynn, James Bay Residents' League.

RICHARD GWYN

Trudeau: a Failed Leader?

OTTAWA — Tentatively, and with aching slowness, Justin Trudeau picked at the piano keys, hit a wrong note, and stopped. He looked up at his father seated beside him. "Don't," said Pierre Elliott Trudeau softly, "let the TV cameras bother you." Justin grinned, and played on.

A gentle, charming scene. And a hard, calculating one. "A very private sort of fellow," in his own words, Trudeau yet has merchandised his private lives as no other Canadian political leader has, and except perhaps John F. Kennedy, as probably no other western politician has done in recent times. In 1974, came Margaret to invite Canadians to vote for the man "who taught me all about loving." Last summer, when an election loomed, came Sacha, bouncing on Trudeau's shoulders through Jasper National Park while the cameras whirred and clicked; now, a fortnight ago, comes Justin, searching for the right key under the kleig lights of CTV.

Few Equals

In his just-published biography, Trudeau, reporter George Radwanski concludes that Trudeau is not so much a "failed" prime minister as an "unfulfilled one." In fact, by most conventional measures, Trudeau has failed as a prime minister. Today, on his 10th anniversary in office, unemployment and inflation combined are at their highest, and the dollar is at its lowest, since the Depression. Separatism, rather than being "dead," is alive and in power in Quebec City.

Trudeau has fulfilled himself instead as a politician. His political equals are hard to find, either within Canada, where, if the polls are to be believed, Trudeau is as close to a fourth consecutive election victory that only John A. Macdonald and Wilfrid Laurier ever matched, or indeed anywhere in the west.

Among contemporary democratic leaders Trudeau is the senior. Among the several hundred western leaders since the Second World War, only eight have lasted longer than Trudeau already has: Tage Erlander of Sweden (23 years), Pandit Nehru of India (18), Robert Menzies of Australia (15), Konrad Adenauer of West Germany (14), Ian Smith of Rhodesia (14), Charles de Gaulle of France (12, in two terms), John Vorster of South Africa (12), and Keith Holyoake of New Zealand (11).

Our perceptions of Trudeau as politician, rather than as philosopher king or as renaissance prince, always have been distorted by memories of his lame "dialogue with the people" campaign of 1972. In fact, that over-confident procession was the single exception to his own competitive rules.

Even in 1968, as an apprentice to the political trade who preached "reason over passion," Trudeau yet understood enough of political passions to call, within three days of taking office, a snap election that he could not lose. In order to do this, Trudeau persuaded his predecessor, the late Prime Minister Lester Pearson, to leave office one week earlier than planned, thus costing Pearson his chance to celebrate both his 71st birthday and his fifth anniversary in office while still at 24 Sussex Drive.

For Pearson, in 1968, this was a hurried exit that he never quite forgave; for Canadians, in 1974, a promise they would never be "zapped" with wage and price controls, for which, once zapped, they seemed determined never to forgive Trudeau except that, at 45 per cent, today's polls have pushed Trudeau within reach of an even larger majority victory than that of four years ago.

PIERRE TRUDEAU
. . . best is yet to come?

Only the flower in his buttonhole, picked in winter from the governor-general's greenhouse and in summer from his garden at 24 Sussex Drive, hasn't changed. Once, in the blithe-spirited post-Expo days, Trudeau flashed before us in long, leather coat and low, silver, Mercedes. Today, in more sombre times, Trudeau appears in the trim, grey-blue suits of the west's only interesting statesman, or in the casual cardigans of a single parent. In 1968, the bashful bachelor; today, the reborn macho, thumbs hooked into his belt.

As an actor almost without peer in politics, Trudeau not only changes masks but creates them. Now a fabricated temper tantrum in the Commons. Now, an artful teasing of the press, whom he captivates, by providing with just a trace of a smile at the ease with which the job is done, soft copy to fill the necessary column inches and airtime seconds.

To a country aching for heroes, Trudeau fills the void by offering himself as a star, a celebrity, which maybe is the nearest to a hero we an get in the era of telepolitics, known less by what he does than by what he is — 24 Sussex Drive as Studio 54 North.

If power corrupts, then politics pursued as an end in itself coarsens. To win a seat in Newfoundland, Trudeau broke a pledge of consultation with Conservative leader Joe Clark, and appointed, without notice, Conservative MP Jack Marshall to the Senate. To defeat Conservative MP Flora Macdonald, the Liberals, two years after they abolished capital punishment, have nominated a pro-capital punishment penitentiary officer as Macdonald's opposition in Kingston. Two examples, among hundreds, of politics practised as the art of necessary manipulation.

His Own Style

To the accusation that Trudeau, by conventional standards, has "failed" as a prime minister, there are persuasive conventional replies. Inflation and unemployment do not make Canada, as Trudeau himself has denied, a "sick country in a healthy world", but only one burdened with its share of universal ills. As for separation, the Parti Quebecois may command power but it cannot command allegiance: as few Quebecers today, the polls show, support independence as did 10 years ago.

The charge of failed leadership Trudeau has to hear is a heavier one. By his person, he dominates the imagination of Canadians as perhaps not even John A. Macdonald and Wilfred Laurier did in their day. Canadians need no reminders that many beyond our borders judge Trudeau a "priceless asset to the industrial world."

Trudeau, though, only teases the imagination of Canadians; he does not direct their imaginations to a collective goal, nor ever has, except in 1968 when he promised a Just Society, and again in 1975 when he talked, briefly, about a New Society. Trudeau's style fascinates Canadians, as much today as 10 years ago. The man, though, has become his own style.

Women Are the Victims of Our Pension System

LEONARD SHIFRIN

If the face you saw was male, you are wrong already.

For every four men over the age of 65 there are more than five women. And by the turn of the century, according to Statistics Canada projections, that ratio will have increased to three women for every two men.

Was your typical senior citizen flanked by a spouse or living alone?

If it was a male you conjured up, then you should have seen him married. Three out of four are.

But among female seniors only one in three is.

The combination of women having a life expectancy seven years greater than men's and the three years that the average husband is older than his wife means that the average woman will outlive her husband through a decade of widowhood.

And, according to both the Canadian Council on Social Development's recent report, "Women and Pensions", and that of the federal Advisory Council on the Status of Women, "Women and Aging", she will likely do it in poverty.

Canada's pension system, they both conclude, hopelessly fails the longer-living sex.

Less than 30 per cent of working women are covered by private pension plans, and 95 per cent of these are in plans requiring at least ten years' service before full vesting of pension rights takes place.

Since statistics show that three-quarters of women aged 22 to 44 change jobs at least once every five years, the proportion of female labor force participants who will wind up with a pension is clearly minuscule.

Nor are many going to be able to rely on survivorship benefits from their husbands' plans.

Although half of male employees are covered by private pension schemes, the bulk of them are in plans that terminate benefits on their death, providing no continuing income to their widows.

The result is that the public pension system which, in theory, is supposed to be a complement to the "primary protection" afforded by private pensions, is the only source of income for most widows.

Although the two reports are substantially different in both style and scope, they are remarkably coincident in their view of what's to be done.

Private pension benefits, they say, should be restructured to provide continuing income to a surviving spouse, with retirement benefits being reduced accordingly. Actuarial calculations, in other words, should be based on the two lives rather than just the one.

They also call for an increase in survivors' benefits under the Canada and Quebec Pension Plans, with the former requiring the bigger hike. (This is one of the few areas in which the benefit provisions of the two plans are substantially different, the QPP providing a $1,500 yearly minimum to widows aged 45 to 65 compared to the CPP's less than $600.)

The Spouse's Allowance, now payable on an income-tested basis to persons 60 to 64 who are married to pensioners, should be replaced by an income-tested pension for all those 60 to 64, say both reports. The unreasonableness of denying the allowance to those in this age group who are in need but not married to someone over the age of 65, they note, is exceeded only by the absurdity of its being terminated on the death of the older spouse.

The two reports also agree that there is no justification for maximum benefits under the combined Old Age Security and Guaranteed Income Supplement programs being less than the poverty line, and call for the income-tested GIS portion to be raised accordingly.

The money to fund these changes, they say, could come from the elimination of the current "tax expenditure" provisions for the aged: the $1,520 exemption for over-65s and the $1,000 deduction for private pension income.

Both of these, they point out, benefit only that portion of the aged population with sufficient income to exceed the taxpaying threshold — 30 per cent of male senior citizens and 12 per cent of women. Moreover, since the extent of individual benefits depends on marginal tax rates, the lion's share of this subsidization goes to a small number of wealthy seniors.

The Status of Women Council report notes that the cost to the Treasury of the age exemption alone is "equal to fully one-third of the entire budget of the GIS".

The two reports should get a sympathetic hearing from Health and Welfare Minister Monique Begin.

For one thing, she was research director of the Royal Commission on the Status of Women which, eight years ago, recommended "that the Guaranteed Income Supplement be increased so that the annual income of the recipients is maintained above the poverty level".

For another, she is known to blanch at the very mention of the 200 newly-bereaved widows, each month, who receive condolence letters from her department advising them that they have lost their Spouse's Allowances along with their spouses.

Lawson Protests 'Misleading Story'

(Senator Edward Lawson addressed the following letter to the publisher of the Victoria Times. Marjorie Nichols, who wrote the article in question, replies below).

Dear Sir:

I want to protest in the strongest possible terms the false headlines and distorted and false information in the story by Marjorie Nichols on Monday, April 3.

The higher salary I received in 1976 was as a result of being named International Director of the newly created Canadian Conference of Teamsters and, as such, was allowable under the guidelines.

The damage to my reputation by this false and misleading story could have been prevented by the simple courtesy of a telephone call to me. You would also have determined that I did not receive in 1977 the increase allowed by the A.I.B., nor was there any increase in 1978 in the salary set for International Directors in 1976.

LAWSON
. . . voluntary action

Even though our union in Canada was not bound by the guidelines, we adopted a voluntary policy that our staff and representatives in Canada would not receive any higher percentage increase or exceed the maximum of $2,400.00 that our members were limited to. This was a voluntary action on our part and was consistent with the views I expressed in the Senate that the Teamsters, as a Trade Union, would carry its share of the sacrifice in support of the guidelines.

It is unfortunate that all the good flowing from that policy was wiped out by the distorted and dishonest misrepresentation of the partial information your reporter obtained and misinterpreted.

If there is an ounce of integrity in your newspaper, I will expect a correction in as equally a prominent place as the offensive article.

Yours truly,

Senator Edward M. Lawson,
International Director.

'What Was the Poor Guy to Do?'

By MARJORIE NICHOLS

WASHINGTON — Edward Lawson, member of the Canadian Senate and Canadian head of the Teamsters union, is most unhappy about recent publicity concerning the amount of his paycheques. In particular, Senator Lawson is disturbed by a report I filed from Washington in which it was disclosed that the independent senator from B.C. received a 218-per cent salary increase from the Teamsters in 1976.

There was no suggestion that Senator Lawson didn't deserve every U.S. penny of his handsome raise, which rivals the all-time Canadian record established when Dave Barrett's New Democrats took over the shop in Victoria. No, the point of the story was that Edward Lawson was the only major labor leader in Canada to endorse the Trudeau government's wage and price control program when it was introduced in 1975.

The national good requires that the nation's lunchbucket carriers put their collective shoulder to the wheel, said the good senator in a memorable speech in the upper chamber.

Courageous and responsible chap, we all said, as Senator Lawson dodged the vitriol hurled at him by other of his trade union brothers.

The senator points out, as did the original story, that part of his 1976 salary boost was reward for promotion. Senator Lawson was in 1976 elevated from his previous position as Teamsters' 12th vice-president to 10th vice-president, international director and conference chairman.

The wage-and price-control program contains provision for salary increases awarded for promotion, although it can be argued that what the senator received in 1976 was something more than an ordinary shove up the executive ladder. A vertical benediction might be more like it.

Senator Lawson argues that he was a hapless victim of the Teamsters' constitution, which establishes official salaries. The point is reluctantly conceded. What was the poor guy to do? Demand that all union salaries be reduced across the board? We're talking about the Teamsters union. Obviously, the senator had to take the greenbacks forced upon him by his elevation. That is what unions are all about after all: solidarity.

Whether Senator Lawson spent sleepless nights worrying that his very own membership, whom he had beseeched to be happy with an eight-per-cent raise, might misconstrue the situation and suspect him of a certain hypocrisy, we, alas, do not know. But for the sake of further argument about that 218-per-cent boost in 1976, let us agree that 210 per cent was remuneration for promotion and that only eight per cent was a cost-of-living bonus.

Which brings us to the year of our Lord, 1977. The same U.S. department of labor files which disclosed Senator Lawson's 1976 salary and expenses, disclose that the man from B.C. had a good year in 1977 as well. To be precise, Lawson received a princely increase from the Teamsters last year of $11,566. In 1976, Senator Lawson's total take from wages was $57,184. In 1977, his Teamsters pay was $68,750. In 1977, it must be noted with emphasis, Senator Lawson's job description was unchanged. He did not receive any official promotions. The extra $11,000-plus apparently was just his annual increment.

In addition to his salary, the senator in 1977 also received "allowances" of $9,860; a hotel and restaurant expense account of $1,009; and transportation benefits totalling $2,627. In summary, Ed Lawson received a total of $82,246 (U.S.) from the International Teamsters last year.

Now, as has been pointed out previously, Senator Lawson is not technically covered by wage and price controls. The organization for which he works has fewer than 500 employees in Canada and is therefore not under the mandatory umbrella.

This is a clear-cut case involving honor, morality and integrity, none of which is covered by any existing Canadian statute. In a telephone callfrom Vancouver, Senator Lawson put forward an interesting thesis: He believes that one particular West Coast newspaper is out to get him. Why else, he wonders aloud, would they keep printing all of those stories about his salary?

Well, the answer is, of course, that Edward Lawson happens to be an important public official, a member of the upper house of the Canadian Parliament who receives public funds ($32,600, including a $5,600 tax-free allowance).

Great issue has been made in the past about the moonlighting done by other senators in corporate boardrooms. The public has, or should have, a right to know what outside jobs are held by its public officials. And Edward Lawson is no exception to that rule, even though he personally believes there is some other ulterior motive.

Senator Lawson does, however, have an air-tight case when he suggests that he is the subject of some curious and unfair double standard and he should protest with vigor to the real culprit in the whole affair: Pierre Elliott Trudeau.

The only reason that Canadians interested in the performance of the independent senator from B.C. have access to his salary files is because the U.S. government in its wisdom decided that such information should be a matter of public record. Because he is an executive of an American-based international union, Senator Lawson's salary must also be disclosed under U.S. law.

If Ed Lawson worked for an all-Canadian union, there would be no law to require the disclosure of his salary. The situation is, to repeat, blatantly unfair.

It would seem to this observer that there are two possible courses of action open to Senator Lawson in his appeal to the man who appointed him. He could throw the weight of his office and prestige behind a concerted campaign for a genuine Canadian freedom-of-information act, which would require the disclosure of all union officials' salaries.

Or, failing that, he might broach Mr. Trudeau on the possibility of a more genuinely Canadian solution, such as the one pioneered in the uranium-cartel case. He could demand legislation making it illegal for any Canadian newspaper to publish information that any lunchbucket carrier in the U.S. can demand as a matter of right.

Lest we might be accused, again, of unfairness in this matter, we shall not even speculate upon which will be Senator Lawson's choice.

How Long Can Legislature Remain Uncivilized?

THE SUN
An Editorial

It's not the first time someone has pointed out that debate in the provincial legislature has become unnecessarily abrasive, even juvenile.

In fact, The Sun has received letters from high school students, appalled at what they witnessed during a visit to the legislature. One student agreed with his father's estimation that "they were a bunch of clowns in Victoria."

A certain amount of lively debate — even a certain amount of name-calling, if witty or well-spoken — is a symptom of a healthy democracy at work.

But constant long-winded harangues, warnings of the most extreme political corruption, the most irresponsible government, the most totalitarian manoeuvres, are a most tedious, wasteful expenditure of the legislature's time and energy.

And now a veteran of the B.C. legislature has stood up and said so — not just said so, but indicated that he is so fed-up with the level of debate that he has lost interest in remaining in the government, and will not run in the next election.

SHELFORD
. . . a parting shot

Cyril Shelford, the MLA in question, believes members spend 80 per cent of their time attacking each other and 20 per cent of their time attacking the problems of the people.

That should rattle people — not just the government but the voters. It represents an alarming waste of money for one thing. And how long will it be before many of the really good MLAs decide to use their talents in a less wasteful forum? Or has that already happened? Are the best people not running for office?

In the language of economics, too many words chasing too little substance has served to devalue the only currency the legislature has — the words its members use. If the legislators do not take their words seriously, why should the public?

Mr. Shelford has recommended a special committee be struck, with a member from each party, to look into how debate might be elevated to something like civilized standards, standards that allow the legislature to get on with the business of law-making, of setting up programs, of governing the province.

It's not a bad idea, and it represents a constructive parting shot — from an MLA who has served long enough to know what he's talking about.

Music Festival Schedule Full

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Major activity in the 1978 Greater Victoria Music Festival began Monday with five centres entertaining continuous classes, except for lunch and dinner breaks, for 12 hours.

This schedule does not let up for the rest of the week and continues with only a little modification, next week.

This is in fact, the festival's second week. The action began last Tuesday and Wednesday with folk dance classes involving public and private schools and community groups.

The session ended with an honor performance Friday, at which the following groups were invited to repeat their dances and received awards:

Spanish Flamenco Rhythms and Kopanitsa, the Intercultural Association of Greater Victoria Adult Folk Dance Award; Victoria Cultural Association of India and Canada, the Community Arts Council of Greater Victoria Junior Folk Dance Award; Josefina Gutierrez, the National Dance Solo Award; Glanford Elementary School, the Nancy Ferguson School Folk Dance Award.

Awards of merit were given to Uplands Elementary School, Shoreline Junior Secondary, Tillicum Elementary, Lansdowne Junior Secondary, Richomnd Elementary, St.Patrick's, Glenlyon, and Gordon Head Elementary.

Vocal classes are taking place this year for the first time in Metropolitan United Church's Ephraim Evans Auditorium.

Indicative of a considerable advance in both quality and quantity of those pursuing the art of singing in this city was a large open class for lieder. There were 17 entrants, only one cancelled and adjudicator Sherrill DeMarco of Alberta praised the generally high standard.

However she was emphatic in saying that a piano adjudicator should have been present to assist her in making a fair appraisal of the work of the entrants, as lieder is always judged as a vocal-piano duo.

"They must be an ensemble," she said, "and therefore the piano should have a proper adjudication as well as the voice, but it is not possible for me to pay full attention to the pianist and the singer at the same time."

Bass Dennis Goodwin with his partner, Tony Booker, were judged winners of the class. Soprano Ingrid Attrot with her sister Rita at the piano, were runners-up.

Sight reading filled most of the day at the two piano centres, Christ Church Cathedral Hall on Vancouver, and First United Fellowship Hall on Balmoral.

Rules of the festival with regard to eligibility for scholarship and bursary awards make it mandatory that piano, organ and speech entrants participate in a sight reading class corresponding to the competitor's age group.

Ms. Alma Brock-Smith of Winnipeg, adjudicating piano here for the first time, commented on the importance of sightreading during her adjudication Monday.

She was pleased with the mandatory aspect of the classes, saying that mastering sight reading cuts in half the time spent on learning a new piece of music.

Phyllis Schuldt of Vancouver is the second piano adjudicator and at Oak Bay Junior Secondary, Dr. Howard Leyton-Brown from Regina is in charge of string classes. Speech arts, with Gay Scrivener adjudicating, will continue through Thursday at St.Matthias Hall.

CANADIAN MUSIC TO BE FEATURED

The second concert to be given by the Victoria Chamber Orchestra will be a program of contemporary Canadian works Friday in Christ Church Cathedral.

The orchestra was formed in 1977 around a nucleus of young professionals eager to play in a small ensemble. Its first concert was given at Craigdarroch Castle in February and featured baroque music.

Friday's concert is being sponsored by Canada Council's Explorations program and the orchestra will be conducted by Victoria musician Glen Fast, recently appointed assistant conductor of the Vancouver Symphony.

The concert will present a varied panorama of the trends and styles current in Canadian concert music. Works for string orchestra will include Norman Symonds' Elegy, Harry Freedman's Five Pieces for Strings, and Hommage by Andre Prevost, a work based on the Grosse Fugue of Beethoven.

Soprano soloist Karen Smith, who has sung leading roles with Vancouver Island Opera, will sing Four Songs on Texts of Yeats, with harp or piano accompaniment by Keith Bissell. Ms.Smith, Victoria Symphony concert mistress Derry Deane, and pianist Phillip Tillotsen, will combine for a performance of Murray Adaskin's Of Man and the Universe.

This work, commissioned for Expo 67 and written on a text of Alexander Pope, offers equally important parts to all three performers.

Vancouver composer Michael Baker, who calls himself a 20th century romantic, has written a lyrical Flute Concerto which will be performed with the orchestra and solo flutist James Kennedy.

Also to be performed is a new work for strings and bells by Joan Hollander, a University of Victoria composition major. The concert starts at 8 p.m. and is free.

MERGER VOTE ORDERED

DUNCAN — A vote on the amalgamation of Duncan and North Cowichan has been ordered for June 17 by Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis.

The order came in the form of a letter Monday.

"The question of the amalgamation of Duncan and North Cowichan has been a topic for discussion in the Cowichan Valley for many years," Curtis wrote. "The issue has been debated time and time again individually by the municipal councils and at joint meetings. Clearly it is time for a decision.

"The future local government structure for the area is a matter that must be resolved not by the two councils, but by the people."

"Accordingly, I intend to do it under the powers invested in me, that a poll be taken Saturday, June 17."

Duncan Mayor Ken Paskin, whose council last week turned down an amalgamation referendum against his wishes, was elated.

Royal Roads Graduation

Defence Minister Barney Danson will be in Victoria this weekend to preside at the convocation and graduation ceremonies of Royal Roads Military College.

Danson is chancellor of the college.

Lieut. James Atwood, son of Mr. and Mrs. J.G. Atwood, 2064 Beach Drive, and Lieut. Grant Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith, 225 Belleville, are among the 20 graduates who will receive bachelor of science degrees, with majors in physics and physical oceanography, as well as Queen's Commissions in the Canadian armed forces.

Other B.C. graduates are Lieut. Richard Clements of Kimberley, Lieut. Philip McFadden of Vancouver, Lieut. Randy Kapman of Gibsons and Lieut. John Steele of Burnaby.

For the second year, the Clarence C. Cook award in physics will be presented at the convocation ceremony, to be held on Friday. The award was established by Prof. Cook, 2118 Granite, former professor at RRMC.

Honorary doctorates of military science will be conferred on Dr. Charles Stacey of Toronto and Brig.-Gen. Keith Greenaway of Ottawa.

All ceremonies and events to take place Friday and Saturday will be open to the public.

The academic awards ceremony starts at noon on Friday and visitors should be in their seats by 11:30 a.m.

That evening there will be a naval display by the destroyer HMCS Mackenzie and the minesweepers HMCS Chignecto, HMCS Miramichi, HMCS Cowichan and HMCS Chaleur, beginning at 5:45 p.m.

The Snowbirds of 431 air demonstration squadron in Cold Lake, Alta., will perform at 6 p.m. and there will be a parachute display by the armed forces' Skyhawks at 6:25 p.m.

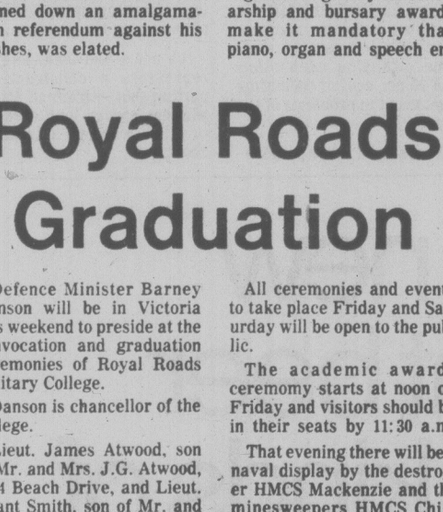
The graduation parade begins at 2 p.m. on Saturday. There will be a trooping of the colors, a fly-past by the Snowbirds, followed by a fly-past by Voodoos of the CFB Comox-based 409 all-weather fighter squadron.

A 17-gun salute will be fired by members of the 5th (B.C.) Field Battery during the graduation parade.



Introduction.

Immigration affects us culturally, socially and economically. Domestically and internationally.

To ensure that immigration continues to work for the good of Canada, our immigration law has undergone some significant changes. And whether you're a fifth generation citizen or just a visitor, you ought to know what's new.

The changes.

For the last four years, individuals and organizations have made suggestions for change to Canada's immigration law and policy.

Many of the responses received have become part of the new immigration law, designed to serve everyone's best interests for years to come.

For the first time, the basic purposes and principles of our immigration law are clearly stated in the law itself. All other provisions of the law, and the way they are carried out by immigration officers, now flow from these purposes and principles:

Non-discrimination. Reunion of families. Humanitarian concern for refugees. And the promotion of Canada's economic, social and cultural goals.

Just words you say? Well read on, because the rest of the new law has been carefully written to make it possible for Canada to live up to its word.

How it affects immigrants and visitors.

From now on, immigrants and those visitors who come to work or study must make all immigration arrangements before they arrive in Canada. No one may change his or her status while inside Canada.

Canada has always allowed sponsorship of the immigration of a wide range of close relatives. With the new family class, Canadian citizens can now sponsor parents of any age.

Canada has always protected refugees within her borders according to a Convention of the United Nations. This protection is now given the force of Canadian law. In addition, a new refugee class defines the when, how and who of accepting refugees for resettlement in Canada.

Civil rights of those involved in immigration proceedings receive greater protection under the new law. And deportation will no longer be the only possible penalty. There are now less drastic alternatives for minor infractions of immigration law. Immigration will not be easier, but it will be more predictable. Immigrants and visitors should always talk to their Canadian Government visa office before they make a move. That way, they'll know exactly where they stand when they step off the plane.

How it affects Canadians.

The new immigration law is a blueprint for the future. A flexible blueprint that allows for unexpected change. Its influence on the fabric of Canadian society will be subtle and long-range.

Under the new law, the federal and provincial governments will share many responsibilities. To this end, formal agreements on immigration planning and management will be made with the Provinces.

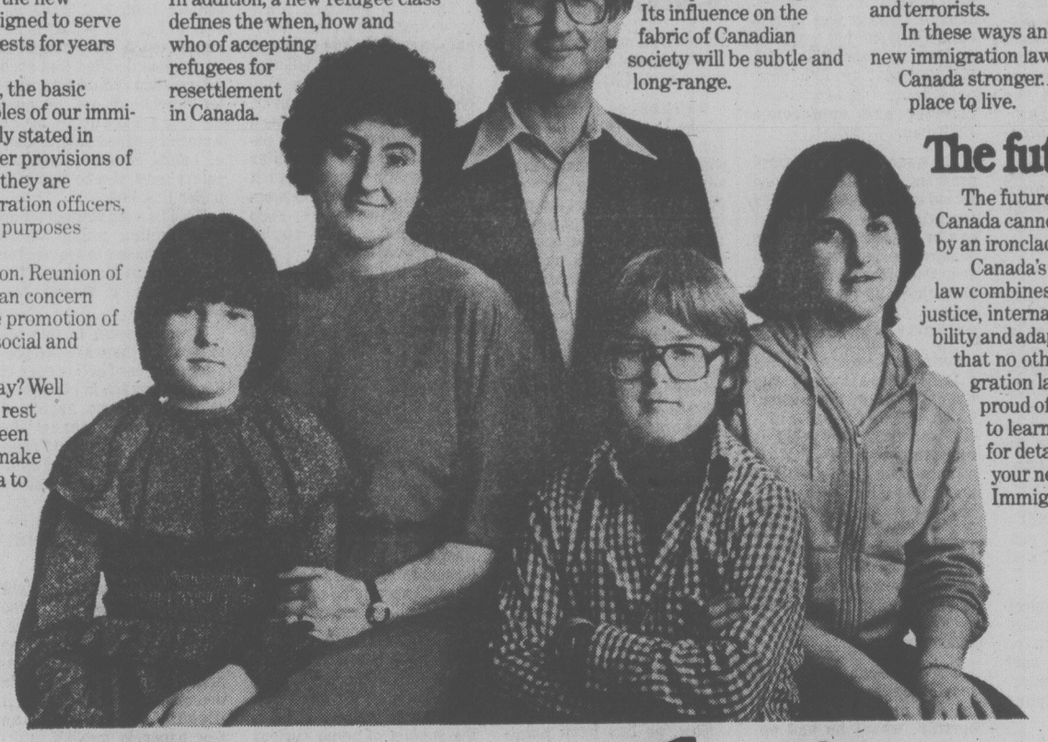
Each year, after federal-provincial discussions, a target figure for immigration volume will be announced. The number will depend upon national, regional, economic and social goals.

Immigrants will be encouraged to settle in places where their particular skills are really needed. They will be discouraged from settling in places where employment is a problem.

Generally speaking, illegal immigrants will find the law tougher than ever. As will those people who exploit illegal immigrants.

The new law, of course, will continue our tradition of strong protection against international criminals and terrorists.

In these ways and more, our new immigration law can only make Canada stronger. And a better place to live.



The future.

The future of immigration in Canada cannot be controlled by an ironclad set of rules.

Canada's new immigration law combines humanity, justice, international responsibility and adaptability in a way that no other country's immigration law ever has. We're proud of it. And we invite you to learn more by asking for detailed pamphlets at your nearby Canada Immigration Centre.

Canada's Immigration Law has changed.

ICBC Reports $8.6M Deficit

The Crown-owned Insurance Corporation of B.C. recorded an $8.6 million deficit from operations last year, but is in a sound financial condition, Education Minister Pat McGeer said Monday.

In the previous fiscal year ICBC had net income of $71.8 million.

McGeer, the minister responsible for the corporation, explained that for the year ended Feb. 28, 1978, the deficit was registered only after deducting $50 million in safe driving discounts and increasing claims reserves by $79 million.

"The rate stablization reserve combined with the unappropriated surplus at year end was $59.4 million—a relatively comfortable position," the corporation said in its annual report.

"The primary financial concern, and the reason for the increased reserves for claims, stems from the cost trends for bodily injury cases. The total number of claims of this type increased from 15,100 for the 1976 policy year to 17,400 for the 1977 policy year.

"At the same time, court-awarded settlements for personal injury claims made dramatic jumps and these, in turn, have forced the insurance corporation to reserve for the likelihood of substantially high payments for bodily injury claims yet to be settled."

The report said that in the last year alone, the average cost per bodily injury claim has increased by 47 per cent to $6,547 in 1977 from $4,454 in 1976.

McGeer said the reason for the huge increase in such claims "is currently being investigated."

He said that despite the operational deficit, B.C. drivers can look forward to continuation of safe driver discounts next year.

The report noted that while premium rates increased by an average of six per cent last year, nine of 10 drivers received a discount.

Asked if premium rates would increase next year, McGeer said that would depend on drivers' performance this year. The report said if the trend in high bodily injury claims payments continues, the premiums would increase.

The corporation said its premiums continue to be among the lowest in the country.

Total revenue last year was $372 million, compared with $385 million the year before. Claims and expenses were $381 million compared with $313 million the previous year.

In other matters, the ICBC report — signed by chairman Ralph Gillen and president Robbie Sherrell — stated that the total investment income of Autoplan and general insurance increased by 17 per cent to $36.4 million in the 1977 fiscal year.

Whale Oil Ship Fined

VANCOUVER (CP) — A shipping company which brought 1,200 tons of sperm oil into Portland, ORE., last September and spirited it away through Vancouver has been fined $8,000 under the American Endangered Species Act, John Pedrick, a spokesman for the United States National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, said Monday.

Pedrick said in a telephone interview from Seattle that an out-of-court settlement was reached and the cheque was received Friday.

"We think word is going to get around that they can't do this kind of thing anymore," he said.

Joseph John Boyles, the captain of the British-registered Stolt Llandaff, was charged after he attempted to dock the ship in Portland but was turned away by customs officials.

Under the act, ships carrying cargoes considered to be endangered species are forbidden to travel within the three-mile territorial limit.

Pedrick said low-level officials in the company may not have known that the ship was not even allowed to dock so the government settled for a fine under the $10,000 maximum and avoided court costs.

Campbell Scrapes Slim P.E.I. Victory

CHARLOTTETOWN (UPI) — Liberal Premier Alex Campbell returned to lead the provincial government today after narrowly defeating the Progressive Conservative Party in one of the island's most hotly contested general elections.

Campbell scraped though to win an unprecendented fourth consecutive term in office Monday by securing approximately 50 percent of the popular vote against Angus Maclean's Conservative party's 48 percent. The National Democratic Party lead by Aquinas Ryan took the remaining one percent.

"I predicted a very close election at the outset. I must confess I wasn't expecting one quite as close and congratulate the leader of the opposition for bringing to the government such an effective campaign," Campbell said.

"I believe the people of Prince Edward Island were issuing a warning and very clear messages but it'll take . . . a couple of weeks to make a re-asssment of the whole meaning of this election campaign," he said.

The Liberals took 17 of the 32-seat provincial legislature and the Conservatives 15. "We've gone full spectrum," Campbell said after the returns mirrored the very same results as 12 years ago.

"We've done better than any opposition party has done in over fifty years." Whereas Maclean, a veteran federal politician, took over the Conservative leadership less than two years ago, his opponent was first elected in 1966 and the 28-day campaign leading up to the election markedly contrasted the two leaders.

While Campbell's government campaigned largely on existing policy pledging social and industrial advances, Maclean's electioneering style broke radically away from any traditional election platform placing the ruling party on the defensive.

Maclean promised nothing but spoke in very general terms about the importance of farming and fishing, the value of a small autonomous communities and the province's growing indebtedness to the federal government.

RHODESIA GOV'T REJECTS TALKS

SALISBURY (Reuter) — Rhodesia's multi-racial interim government today rejected a British-U.S. proposal for an all-party conference on the future of Rhodesia.

"It appears to be doomed to certain failure," said a statement issued by the executive council, top-tier of the government.

The statement said the council was not prepared to reopen talks on matters which had taken its members three months of negotiation to decide.

U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and British Foreign Secretary David Owen flew here last week in an attempt to persuade members of the interim government to attend the conference, which would bring them to the bargaining table with the leaders of the Patriotic Front guerrilla alliance.

Agreement was announced in parliament here by Prime Minister John Vorster.

The plan, put forward by Canada, the United States, Britain, France and West Germany, envisions independence for the mineral-rich territory by the end of this year.

NATO Eyes Tank Arms

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The United States, Britain, France and West Germany are negotiating to build together a new rocket that could knock out tanks without relying on the controversial neutron warhead.

An update of a Russian weapon of the Second World War, the rockets are set up in batteries of 12 tubes each. They could be launched from the backs of trucks or armored vehicles against tanks some 20 miles away. Each rocket would carry about 600 pounds of non-nuclear explosive.

Pentagon officials confirmed Monday that cooperative development and production of the rockets to combat the Soviet tank threat is under active discussion by NATO defence leaders.

William Perry, Pentagon research director, is expected to discuss the rocket project during meetings of the Conference of National Armament Directors in Brussels this week.

After President Carter postponed his decision on whether to produce the neutron warhead for U.S. forces stationed in West Germany, Defence Secetary Harold Brown said there were alternatives to that nuclear weapon for offsetting the Soviet edge in tanks.

The multiple launch rocket system, as it is called, is but one of several alternatives to the neutron warhead, defence officials said, but a highly promising looking one.

The first generation of the rocket would fall free like an artillery shell. Later versions, as envisoned by weapons' designers, would have guidance inside each warhead for pinpoint accuracy.

Currently, Boeing and Vought are working on designs and test models for the U.S. Army. If current negotiations succeed, firms in Britain, France and West Germany will join in the development and production program.

Specialists said the advantages of this rocket are that it has more killing power than an artillery shell, is easy to move around the battlefield and set up for accurate firing, and is easy to produce and maintain.

Although it is too early to say how many would be produced, one estimate was up to 30,000 rocket tubes under a $4 billion to $5 billion program. Pentagon officials said they doubted the program, if approved, would be that large, estimating a cost of between $1 billion or $2 billion.

No Literary Giant But The Readers Like His Style

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

But one thing about Rohmer — he produces. Moreover, his books sell.

Since the 54-year-old native of Ontario began writing seriously in 1970, he's averaged one book a year, churning out four novels and three non-fiction works. His books have sold more than half a million copies to date.

He's a corporation lawyer, who has represented the interests of major land developers in Ontario and the North West Territories for more than 20 years.

He's a military man, too; since Feb. 1, a major-general in charge of all militia, naval reserve and air reserve units across Canada.

That job alone takes up three days of his standard seven-day work week.

He's a flyer as well, having been a jet fighter pilot and wing commander. During the Second World War he completed 135 missions in Mustangs and flew low-level reconnaisance over the beachheads at D-Day.

"I had the best view of anyone," he says.

He still flies and has an Air Force ticket to operate a single-engine Otter. He owns a five seater Short-Take-Off-and-Landing (STOL) Helio Courier in which he commutes between his office in Toronto and 50-acre farm at Collingwood near Georgian Bay where he does most of his writing.

These days Rohmer is a man on the go. Twice in the past week he has popped into Victoria, once on military business, the other on a one-day visit as part of a cross-Canada tour to plug his latest book, a biography of E.P. Taylor, Canada's multimillionaire entrepreneur and horse-racing enthusiast.

Rohmer clearly enjoys the pace.

"What role do I prefer?"

"Them all. I'm a lawyer, military person and author."

Rohmer is, indeed, an unflappable mix of all three. He has the demeanor of the lawyer, the discipline of the soldier and the same urgency to share his thoughts with others that characterizes all authors.

The E.P.Taylor biography is something of an anomoly, but then again Taylor himself asked Rohmer to write it. And who refuses E. P. Taylor?

"I write in the form I do to put forth propositions I feel are worth talking about," he says, adding his books are a mechanism to influence thinking, to present people with facts he believes they're not getting and to discuss events . . . and possibilities.

He fears if Canadian politicians delay much longer in renegotiating the terms of confederation, the country will break apart.

North American society, too, is in jeopardy if solutions aren't soon forthcoming to the pressing energy problems.

So far he's been right on target. His novel, Separation, came out six months before the Parti Quebecois swept into power in Quebec and, in his words, "the unspeakable happened."

Two other novels, Exxoneration and his best-selling Ultimatum, written in 1974 and 1973 respectively, anticipated critical natural gas shortages that are now plaguing the United States.

He's 200 pages into his next novel about how a newly elected U.S. president, named John Heath Hansen, deals with catastrophic gas shortages in 1985. He isn't sure what the title will be. Maybe Great Balls of Gas, he says.

Up to now he's written almost exclusively about Canadians for Canadians.

He makes no pretence about his writings.

"I don't intend to write the normal literary style," he says.

"What I write about are events. The characters are there only to carry the events forward, to make the point I want to make.

"I don't have enough time or space to develop the characters as the academics say they should be developed."

"The real critics are the people who buy the books.

"If my books weren't worth a damn, then no one would buy them."

ROHMER . . . militia, law, literature

Trustees to Study Student Unrest

They made the decision after being told a major educational overhaul is necessary to reduce student unrest in the system.

Superintendent Alan Stables told the board in a brief submitted Monday night serious system inadequacies are causing problems for students between the ages of 13 and 16.

The brief, which was not requested by the board, was prepared independently by the administration out of concern for the services being provided to students at the junior level.

Stables recommended a total upgrading of areas the administration regards as inadequate.

In the brief, he recommends providing more program variety, better counselling services, diagnostic and remedial services and service training for staff teaching communication skills.

Pupils are dropping out of the system because of inadequate instruction, educational deficiency, boredom and personal problems, Stables said.

Other students who stay in the system are not learning and become adjusted to failure or experience little challenge and pass on "as they would through any ordeal," according to the brief.

The findings are the result of a review of Grade 7 and junior secondary programs, a review of attendance records, studies of students who leave the system and discussions with parents, pupils, principals and teachers.

"This is not a program for entertainment or baby sitting. It is a program concerned with mastery of skills probably the lack of which is at the core of a high percentage of boredom, frustration and delinquency," Stables said.

He recommended the board first form a committee to set educational goals at the junior level and come up with a working model.

Budget Set At $10.9m In Oak Bay

Oak Bay council Monday adopted a $10.9 million budget and set a municipal tax rate of 63.97 mills.

The 1978 budget is up $1.1 million from a year ago even though the local tax rate is down one mill, largely because of debt reduction.

Meanwhile property assessments set by the province have jumped, with the result that taxpayers will mostly pay more.

Mayor Brian Smith said the budget comes as a result of several months' work by council and the recreation commission to hold the tax rate at its 1977 level.

Council lowered the debt and general rate one mill but it must also meet non-municipal obligations such as the regional district, regional hospital and school district tax rates, which are up over four mills.

A few owners of new houses or apartment owners who have been subject to assessment controls may find they will pay lower taxes, Smith said.

Smith said a typical south Oak Bay home assessed at $56,700 will face a tax increase of $91 if the owner is under 65 and $41 if over 65.

He said actual spending this year will rise eight per cent from last year for municipal services. But Oak Bay's outside obligations — as mentioned above — have jumped 18.34 per cent.

The municipality's regional district share is up 55 per cent, including a 25 per cent hike for wages.

Assessment changes have helped raise the value of one mill in Oak Bay from $59,900 to $65,900, which will change as assessments are phased in over the next two years.

Smith said the tennis bubble ran at an operating profit of $62,000 or broke even when debt retirement was subtracted.

He said the recreation centre returns 78 per cent of its cost compared with an average of well below 50 per cent in most public recreation facilities.

He expressed concern about the growing cost of regional government, especially in salaries.

If the province paid its full share of grants in lieu of taxes, Oak Bay could boast a lower mill rate than Victoria, said Ald. Doug Watts.

He said the full effect of such grants will not be felt until the province recognizes the University of Victoria property, which would mean an extra $350,000 to Oak Bay.

The sum would absorb all the increases imposed by outside agencies this year, and cause the mill rate to drop five or six mills, Watts said.

Police PR Cuts 'Disaster'

Victoria Ald. Robin Blencoe criticised the city's police board Monday for proposing to cut $1,500 from the $5,400 allocated for the Victoria police department's community relations section in 1978.

Blencoe said the reduction in funds will destroy the effectiveness of the community relations program.

In a letter to the board, dated April 19, Blencoe said that in other cities, police forces are moving with sincerity and enthusiasm into the community, and the work is being funded at a respectable level.

He said it is disastrous to cut $1,500 from the $5,400 allocated.

"Any suggestion that we are at the moment actually moving ahead in this area is difficult to comprehend."

Blencoe, who has established himself as city council's leading advocate for greater community contact by the police department, urged the board to reconsider its position.

Blencoe is currently working on a report on team policing, a system that stresses personal contact between police officers and people in their beat areas.

The board is to discuss the team concept at a future meeting.

Council Hikes Pay

Oak Bay aldermen Monday voted themselves a four per cent pay raise that works out to $10.53 a month.

Mayor Brian Smith said the bylaw to raise aldermen's salaries from $3,240 to $3,370 a year, and his salary from $7,452 to $7,750, is in keeping with a policy of taking minimal increases regularly rather than infrequent but large ones.

The raise is retroactive to Jan. 1.

Salary Idea Wrong?

Royal Oak Community Association president Ben Pires said today he believes Saanich council acted wrongly Monday in asking ratepayer groups to decide whether the mayor and aldermen should have a salary increase.

Pires said the question of how much elected representatives should be paid is one that should be decided by a special provincially-appointed commission.

Council's budget committee Monday turned down motions to raise Mayor Mel Couvelier's $18,000 stipend by six per cent and aldermen's $6,000 by four per cent.

Instead, it was decided to refer the matter to a committee representing Saanich's 11 ratepayer groups, which will be asked to present its recommendations later this year so that any increase could take effect following the November civic elections.

One immediate snag raised by Pires today: there is no such committee of ratepayer groups in existence.

He said he opposes the principle, and is concerned that council seems to be trying to foist such a body on the associations. (Recently, he noted, council decided that its new environment advisory committee should include a representative from the non-existent council of community associations).

"We have no intention of forming a ratepayers' group or bloc," Pires said.

"We don't want to fall into the trap of being an organized lobby group."

Surviving Bakers Set to Expand

Local bakeries are poised to expand following the announced closure of McDonalds bakery, the Times learned today.

McDonalds announced Tuesday it will close May 26, laying off 62 of its 80 employees.

The remaining 18 will be kept on to handle sales and distribution.

Fernwood Bakery owner Robert Betker said he can triple his production and hire 12 of the 62 workers about to be laid off by McDonalds if he can obtain financing to expand.

Rosebud Bakers owner Al Herzog will hire one employee immediately and is looking for financing to move to a larger building so he can hire more. Rosebud already has 33 employees.

Betker said his bakery at 775 Lampson could be doubled in size and its production tripled.

" I have four employees now but I would need at least a dozen more. It could happen very quickly if I can get a little financing."

Dave Kozak, business representative for the Teamsters Union local which represents the McDonald employees, said today the company kept the union informed about the problems it was facing.

The employees knew some changes were going to have to be made but were surprised at the drastic nature of the company's move, he said.

Kozak said the union has met with company representatives on one occasion and other meetings are scheduled in order to try and find jobs for the employees facing layoffs.

About 45 of the 62 employees affected by the closure belong to the union and the remainder are office staff and supervisors, he said.

John McDonald, who sold the business to McGavins in 1972, said the closure is tragic for Victoria but necessary from the point of view of McGavins.

He said the Vancouver firm was losing large sums of money across the province and had to close one of its three bakeries, Kelowna, Langley or Victoria.

The closure means Victoria will receive bread from the Langley bakery. The company also let eight employees go at the Kelowna bakery.

Costs were rising while bread costs were fairly rigid, due to low consumption and keen competition from supermarket bakeries.

Rape Centre Funding Urged

The Status of Women Action Group (SWAG) has urged the intermunicipal grants committee to reconsider its recent decision not to fund Victoria's Rape Relief Centre.

Earlier this month the committee turned down a request from the centre for about $16,000. Aldermen on the committee argued that Need-Crisis Line could provide counselling for rape victims and that the Rape Relief Centre should be totally funded by the provincial government.

In a letter to the committee SWAG president Shirley Nordstrom attacked both points, saying that the centre provides a community service and that Need has been referring rape victims to Rape Relief.

"The services provided by Need are vital but they do not extend far enough to handle rape cases," she writes. "Rape Relief counsellors are especially trained in legal and medical procedures which are unique to rape. Rape Relief provides follow-up counselling for continued support. This is essential on a personal level and also on a legal level."

TOWN TALK

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police could have used some of the trusty steeds that made their musical ride famous when the Colwood detachment went looking for a lost cow last weekend.

They made do with their patrol cars, however, and an RCMP spokesman said Monday that the animal was rounded up without any difficulty.

"No problem," said the RCMP officer. "We always get our, uh . . ."

"Cow," supplied the Times reporter.

Take Premier Bill Bennett, a clotheshorse if ever there was one. He's always dapper, usually in a subdued, dark three-piece suit as befits his background and image.

But surprise, surprise.

When that whopping great delegation of disgruntled northerners came down from Fort Nelson to holler their protests about the threatened closure of the Fort Nelson link of the B.C. railway, guess what da preem wore?

A very ordinary sports jacket and slacks outfit that was, as one observer said, "jes' plain folks."

Tom and Margaret Denny are looking forward this summer to a reunion with Eric and Susan Hiscock whom they met when they were overseas some time ago ago to bring back their motor sailor, Daphne Isle, from Britain.

Originally from Britain, the Hiscocks have sailed around the world several times and Hiscock is well-known for the books and articles on the many places they have visited.

The Hiscocks have been living aboard their boat Wanderer IV in New Zealand for about two years.

Two Victoria men whose sphere of activity embraces organized labor and politics have been elected to the board of trustees of an international organization dedicated to fostering public awareness and interest in the history of the labor movement in the Pacific Northwest.

Larry Ryan, secretary-treasurer of the Victoria Labor Council, and Larry Tickner, representing the Socialist Party of Canada, were named B.C. representatives to the board of the Pacific Northwest Labor History Association, at the association's 11th annual conference in Seattle last weekend.

Although it now includes many trade unionists, the organization was originally started by academics and Tickner says its conference has been described as a meeting between the "pointy heads and hard hats."

Both Tickner and Ryan deplore the fact that so little is known or taught about the rich history — social, economic and cultural — of the working people of B.C.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

John George Auxi, 117 St. Andrews, is charged in the Dec. 11 shooting deaths of 41-year-old Gizelle Schild and 43-year-old Sandor Kormos in a rooming house at 1242 Fort.

The hearing has been scheduled for every day this week except Wednesday. Auxi is represemted by David Vickers, former deputy attorney-general, while Nicholas Lang is presenting the crown's case.

Judge Fred Green sentenced a 27-year-old man to 10 months in jail and placed him on a year's probation.

Charlie Gordon Remington, 2530 Mount Newton Cross Road, pleaded guilty last Tuesday to breaking and entering and was remanded until Monday for sentencing.

Remington and his wife, 28-year-old Kathleen Maria Remington, were jointly charged with a break-in last Monday at Island Furniture Mart, 2513 Beacon, Sidney, and with possession of stolen property. Mrs. Remington has been remanded to today for election of her trial method.

Before sentencing, defence lawyer Brian MacKenzie told the court Remington couldn't function in a society he hadn't known since the age of 13. MacKenzie said Remington had difficulty receiving social assistance from Vancouver and lost a logging job in Sooke because of it.

Remington's parole had been revoked prior to the conviction. He was due for release Oct. 31, 1978, on a conviction for trafficking in narcotics.

Green called Remington's record "disgraceful" and said he had a duty to the public. But the judge noted that Remington was given only one probation previously and imposed the 10-month term, which would extend his jail time a maximum of about three months, and a one-year probation term.

A 25-year-old was remanded in custody for a pre-sentence report and psychiatric assessment after pleading guilty to a total of six charges.

David Allen Rendell, no fixed address, entered the pleas on two counts of breaking and entering, and one count each of theft over $200, dangerous driving, hit and run, and possession of stolen property.

Crown counsel Richard Anthony told the court the break-ins occurred at S.J. Peden Ltd., 2855 Quesnel, and Empress Pontiac-Buick, 2867 Douglas, the theft charge was in connection with a car stolen from Ted Brooks Chevrolet, a car dealership in Calgary, and the possession charge dealt with another auto.

Donald Franklin Karpenchuk, 18, of Calgary, also pleaded guilty to possession of a stolen Camaro, valued at $8,000, and the two break-ins in Victoria. Karpenchuk was remanded to May 8 for a pre-sentence report.

Legal-aid lawyer Scott Marshall made the request for a pre-sentence report and psychiatric assessment.

Rendell is charged with a break-in April 11 at International Knives, 574 Yates, in which seven handguns valued at close to $2,000 were taken, and with two counts of fraud. Elections and possible pleas to those charges may be taken on May 12.

Anthony withdrew a charge of impaired driving after 27-year-old James Ernest Andres, 3751 Nancy Hankes, pleaded guilty to refusing a breath test demand.

Court was told Andres was stopped on Cedar Hill Cross Road at about 1:50 a.m. Jan. 16 after he crossed the centre of the road and nearly collided head-on with an oncoming Saanich police car.

Fined for drinking-driving were: George McIldoon, 63, of 121 Rendall, $700; Franklin Thomas Algard, 55, of 3090 Uplands, $450; Hector Joseph Sicard, 23, of 639 Constance, $400; James Lawrence Dignan, 46, of 1354 Craigdarroch, $400; and Wayne St. Pierre, 25, of 2308 Wark, $300.

Curtis Backs Hill Climb

The Victoria Motorcycle Club has won the support of a cabinet minister in its fight to get back the hill it has raced on one day a year since 1920.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis said on the weekend that he supports the club's efforts to regain the hill.

Nearly two weeks ago the Victoria and Saanich parks committee turned down the motorcycle's request for a permit to stage the event, which is held on the back side of Mount Douglas.

"Motorcycling is a sport which, when it is policed and well-run as this event is, deserves recognition and its own use of public facilities. I hope the committee will reconsider its decision," said Curtis.

He accused the committee of being "short-sighted in the extreme."

Heroin Pedlars Get Life

VANCOUVER (CP) — Sentences ranging from 16 years to life imprisonment were handed Monday to six men found guilty last week in an international heroin trafficking conspiracy.

Justice H. C. McKay of British Columbia Supreme Court said the six were motivated by greed and there was little doubt they would have funds waiting for them on their release from prison.

He imposed life sentences for conspiring to traffic in heroin on Jiri Jasicek, Vratislav Cech, Vaclav Roman Starostik and Joseph Gaja. Sentenced to 16 years each were Vasil Padaras and Joseph Vetrovec.

All were Canadian citizens of Czechoslovakian origin living in the Vancouver area.

The Supreme Court judge commended the RCMP on its handling of the case which involved Bangkok, Hong Kong, Winnipeg, Vancouver and cities in the United States.

The convictions concluded B.C.'s longest criminal trial — which opened Aug. 12, 1977.

The investigation began with the seizure by police of five pounds of heroin from a suspect in Hawaii.

Court was told that during the investigation here, police seized $265,360 in cash and more than 13 pounds of heroin, and spent $78,600 in making buys from various contacts.

Occasionaly some of our store managers buy a little too much of some items and find themselves over-stocked.

So we decided to have our first-ever RED TAG SALE.

This gives every manager a chance to clear the over-stock which is costing him money, while YOU get in on some greatly-slashed prices... not just 'Sale Prices' but 'CLEARANCE PRICES'.

up to 50% OFF and in some cases even more!

Items on sale include CB, stereo, Science Fair and Archer* build-and-learn kits, do-it-yourself parts and electronic projects, toys and more. The bargains may vary from store to store, but each manager has a big selection of RED TAG merchandise at greatly slashed prices.

Pacific Pete

Pacific Petroleums Ltd., with stepped-up oil and gas activity in Canada and abroad, had a 17-per-cent increase in earnings in the first quarter of 1978.

L. M. Rasmussen, president and chief executive, told the annual meeting that earnings increased to $25.1 million or $1.18 a share from $21.5 million or $1.01 in the first three months of 1977.

The company declared a semi-annual dividend of 45.8 cents a share, payable June 30 to shareholders of record June 7, 1978.

As reported earlier, earnings for all of 1977 totalled $85.5 million or $4 a share, up from $66.4 million or $3.11 the previous year.

The Calgary-based company made a third discovery recently in the West Pembina region of Alberta, Rasmussen said. The successful oil well is 1.6 kilometres southeast of a previous oil discovery and eight kilometres northwest of a previous gas discovery.

The previous oil discovery was tied into the pipeline system this month and is producing a low-sulphur, high-gravity crude, he said.

Rasmussen also announced that Pacific will begin work soon on an $11.8-million research project at the company's north Kinsella oilfield in Alberta.

Kaiser Resources

Kaiser Resources reported net earnings of $13,380,000 or 50 cents a share during the first quarter of 1978, compared with $14,513,000 or 54 cents a share during the same period last year.

The results were achieved on sales of $77,411,000, an improvement over first-quarter sales of $73,106,000 in 1977.

Edgar F. Kaiser, president and chief executive officer, said that net earnings were lower than last year primarily because of high unit costs caused by low unit volumes.

Production was halted during a 10-day work stoppage by members of the United Mine Workers of America with whom the company is continuing negotiations for a new contract.

The company is also negotiating with Japanese customers and partners on the price of metallurgical coal to be delivered under the company's long-term contract after March 31.

Metallurgical coal shipments during the first quarter totalled 1,209,000 long tons compared with 1,254,000 long tons during the same period last year.

Walt Disney

Walt Disney Productions reported a sizeable increase in corporate profits for the fiscal second quarter, aided by a 17-per-cent rise in attendance at its Disney World amusement park.

The second quarter also set a new record for daily attendance at the park, located in Orlando, Fla., of 85,123 March 28, and a new weekly attendance record of 481,123 in March, the company's president Card Walker said.

However, attendance at the company's Disneyland park in Anaheim, Calif., declined two per cent to 1,668,000 in the second quarter compared with the same period a year ago, largely the result of one of the rainiest seasons in southern California's history.

For the second quarter ended March 31, the company's profits rose to $23,028,000, or 71 cents a share from $17,786,000, or 54 cents a share in the comparable period a year ago. Sales totalled $169.9 million, up from $140.0 million in the 1977 period.

Profits for the six months ended March 31 amounted to $36,381,000, or $1.12 a share, up from $29,614,000, or 91 cents a share in one year ago period. Sales climbed to $307.0 million from $259.5 million.

Denison Mines

Denison Mines Ltd. reports earnings of $8.7 million or $1.90 a share for the first quarter of 1978, up from $5.7 million or $1.25 for the same period a year ago. The company said the increase reflects more uranium deliveries, higher net revenue from oil and gas operations and the decline in the value of the Canadian dollar.

Thanks to those who chose Autoshield.

When Royal Insurance first offered B.C. drivers a choice in car insurance, we had no idea the response would be so great. Over 25 thousand people chose our Autoshield coverage for their collision insurance this year.

We'd like to take this opportunity to thank those who chose Autoshield, and the independent agents who handle Autoshield for us. Now, more than ever, we're confident that there is a need for an auto insurance alternative in B.C.

Whether it was our loss of use coverage, our emergency road service, our choice of deductibles, or simply the fact that they want the personal service an independant agent can offer, a lot of people chose Autoshield.

So Royal Insurance is here to stay. And if you're in the market for car insurance, now or in the future, we'd like to invite you to call an Autoshield agent and make your choice.

Massive Leak Denied

ST. EUSTACHE, Que. (CP) — The owner of a service station denied Monday that one of his storage tanks was the source of a gasoline leak which municipal authorities say has dumped up to 40,000 gallons of high-octane gas into the city's sewer system.

Romeo Goyer, owner of Goyer Gulf service station, said in an interview: "I have done nothing wrong but authorities are trying to put all the blame on me."

Goyer says he is convinced that the four-inch gash found in the the 12,500-gallon storage tank was caused by workmen digging up the underground reservoir last week.

But Mayor Guy Belisle reiterated a claim made last week that the tank has been leaking for at least a year.

About 2,500 people were evacuated from their homes after an explosion at a sewage pumping station nearly two weeks ago, but most have been permitted to return.

There are still 464 people who have not returned to their homes because of the danger of more explosions. About 9,000 gallons of gas have been pumped from the sewers.

Gov't to Tighten Import Oil Flow

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal government intends to limit Canadian reliance on imported oil to one-third of total demand or 800,000 barrels a day by 1985, the assistant deputy minister of energy, mines and resources said Monday.

A. D. Hunt told the annual meeting of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy that the level now is "tolerable but not altogether satisfactory" and the federal government eventually intends to further reduce reliance on imported oil.

Canada currently consumes about 1.8 million barrels a day, with net imports accounting for 385,000 barrels. But industry sources expect imports to rise sharply in the next several years unless Canada develops substantial new production.

Hunt said Canada's energy policy must be one of "flexible self-reliance" because the world energy picture fluctuates and it would be wrong to commit the country irrevocably to one particular route.

Brink's Jailing

MONTREAL (CP) — Raymond Patenaude, a 45-year-old former convict, was sentenced to two and a half years in prison Monday for possession of a $13,000 portion of $523,000 stole from a Brink's armored truck in December 1976.

Prosecutor Louis Villemure said the sentence will be appealed by the Crown on the grounds it is too light.

INMATE DROP IN FUTURE?

OTTAWA (CP) — Penitentiary officials conceded today they have no idea whether a population with a decreasing proportion of young people will mean fewer prisoners in the future.

The bulk of the country's 9,000 prisoners are young, with an average age of 24, Commissioner Don Yeomans of the Canadian Penitentiary Service told the Commons justice committee.

Yeomans was asked whether the service took such information into account in its prison construction program.

It did not, he replied to questions from Bruce Halliday (PC—Oxford).

But if the number of prisoners decreases, the service would simply close earlier than planned some older prisons.

Ft. Nelson Rail Ruling In Six Weeks: Bennett

FORT NELSON (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett said Monday the government will make a decision on the future of B.C. Railway's Fort Nelson extension within the next six weeks.

Bennett told 1,200 persons attending a public meeting the government would use the time to prepare a case for keeping the 400-kilometre rail link with Fort St. John in operation.

But persons at the meeting said they were not satisfied with Bennett's comments, adding that a firm decision on the line's future is needed now to keep people from leaving the northeastern B.C. community.

Bennett said the north's best guarantee was the aggressive resource development policies of his government, citing massive re-investment by the forest industry and the stimulation of the mining and oil industries.

"The railway must have freight to haul," he said. "Today it has it. The darkest days of the BCR were a few years ago and today I would say it has never been running better."

Bennett's decision to visit Fort Nelson followed the recent interim report of a royal commission into the BCR which recommended closing the extension at a substantial saving to the taxpayers.

The premier, accompanied by Economic Development Minister Don Phillips, Highways Minister Alex Fraser and MLA Ed Smith (SC-Peace River North), toured local lumber mills and a sulphur plant before meeting the citizens.

Later, in Fort St. John, the premier said the provincial government had asked the federal government and Foothills Pipe Line Co. to provide funding to keep the Fort Nelson extension in operation.

Foothills, a Calgary-based company, is involved in construction of the Alaska Highway pipeline. Bennett said the BCR line will likely carry close to 60 per cent of pipe tonnage required for the pipeline project.

"We know the BCR will never make a profit on freight haulage, but there are other factors in the equation and the facility makes an unseen profit for the whole province," he said.

ORGAN GIFT CARDS IN LICENCE OFFICES

Health Minister Bob McClelland said Monday that organ donor information pamphlets and consent cards now are available from all public health units and the major motor licence offices in B.C.

Under the program, announced last year by Premier Bill Bennett, persons over the age of 19 and in good health can qualify to be donors.

A colored decal is affixed to the top right corner of the driver's licence to alert police, ambulance crew and hospital staff to look for a signed donor card, McClelland said.

Halibut Gear Pushes Cost

VANCOUVER (CP) — Halibut fishboat owners need a larger share of the take in order to pay for expensive equipment installed on board their vessels, two groups representing the owners in negotiations with unionized halibut fishermen said Monday.

The owners, who now get 20 per cent of the boat share, want to boost their slice to from 28 to 36 per cent. They warned that it would be uneconomical for them to continue operating if they don't get the increase.

In a joint statement released by the British Columbia Fishing Vessels Owners Association and the Pacific Coast Vessel Owners' Guild, they say installation of sophisticated electronic gear, such as radar and automatic pilots, and modern refrigeration and lifesaving equipment has increased their costs.

"All this equipment and the cost of maintaining it in seaworthy condition is financed out of the boat share and it is therefore reasonable to ask for an increase in the boat share," says the statement.

Negotiators for the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Unions, which represents the fishermen, says union members are prepared to reduce their share of the take if the owners prove they are hurting financially.

The union has warned that if the owners keep their vessels tied up this year, they could be shut out of the American halibut fishery, which is located in Alaskan waters.

Van. General RNs Petition for Quality

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 300 registered nurses at Vancouver General Hospital have signed a petition backing a letter to the hospital's president seeking assurances that high nursing standings at VGH will be continued.

The letter to Larry Truitt, sent Monday by 23 registered nurses in the Committee of Concerned Nurses, complained about a lack of leadership for nurses and the hospital's lack of respect for new ideas to improve patient care.

It asks Truitt to assure them by Friday that he will allow the continuation of high standards.

The letter follows the recent resignation of Bonnie Lantz, director of surgical nurses, who quit over nursing policies at VGH.

The committee also sent a letter Monday to Dorothy Babcock, acting director of nurses, complaining of "frustration, lack of trust and low morale existing among the nursing staff at this time."

Seattle To Battle Milfoil

DEBATE REJECTED ON 2,4-D IN LAKE

SEATTLE (CP) — The Seattle area is preparing an assault on European water milfoil, a weed which chokes lakes and is being battled with chemicals and other programs in B.C.

Metro in King County, with support from the University of Washington, the state Department of Ecology, King County and Seattle, is preparing a two-year trial of methods.

The Metro test, to begin in mid-June, will be done in Lake Washington's Union Bay, which has what Dick Thayer, a state Department of Ecology expert, terms a classic case of milfoil infestation.

Officials fear milfoil could go on a rampage down the Columbia, taking root and choking off reservoirs in the river. It already is a problem in Banks Lake, a huge Columbia Basin irrigation reservoir fed by the Columbia River at Grand Coulee.

The NDP opposition Monday lost out in a bid for an emergency debate into the provincial government's intention to use the herbicide 2,4-D in the Okanagan Lake system this summer to control Eurasian water milfoil.

Speaker Harvey Schroeder ruled that the issue clearly failed the requirements for an emergency debate. The NDP did not contest the decision.

Bob Skelly (NDP-Alberni) told reporters he suspects that 2,4-D is both cancer-causing and causes birth defects, and it should not be used.

He said he reached that conclusion and called for the emergency debate in the legislature after learning that the United States Environmental Protetion Agency's cancer assessment group has found that there is positive evidence that the herbicide is carcinogenic, or cancer-causing.

However, Environment Minister Jim Nielsen said Monday he has contacted the U.S. government and is not convinced that the chemical is unsafe.

He said the provincial government still intends to go ahead with its summer control program utilizing the herbicide, and suggested tht some environmentalists are using scare tactics.

SAVE ENERGY SAVE MONEY

INTRODUCING ENERGY-SAVER LOANS. A LIMITED-TIME OFFER OF SPECIAL INTEREST RATES ON ENERGY-SAVING CAR AND HOMEOWNER LOANS.

Bank of Montreal believes in energy conservation. That's why we're offering Energy-Saver Loans at special rates until June 10th. To help encourage people to save energy. When you qualify for your Energy-Saver Loan, you could save a substantial amount on your repayments, depending upon the amount you borrow.

Save with Energy-Saver Car Loans.

Just call on your Bank of Montreal Loans Manager and talk about the kind of new or used car you're planning to buy.

You can take advantage of the special low rates on Energy-Saver Car Loans if it's a 1975 (or later) model, and the average* mileage performance when new was 22 mpg or 35 km/gal or better (based on published statistics). Our Loans Manager can show you how much you could save.

Save with Energy-Saver Homeowner Loans.

We could save you money if you're planning to insulate, put on new siding, install a new furnace, repair your roof or make any other energy-saving improvement.

Again, your Bank of Montreal Loans Manager would be pleased to show you how much you could save.

New Disability Insurance option.

Bank of Montreal now offers a low cost disability insurance option on F.F.P. personal loans. So if you ever find yourself unable to make payments because of sickness or accident, they can be made for you. While you're discussing your Energy-Saver Loan, be sure to ask about this option. And of course, all F.F.P. personal loans are life insured at no extra cost.

June 10th is the last day to save.

You have from now until June 10th to see your Bank of Montreal Loans Manager with your energy-saving idea. Now's the time to get moving to save money on your loan. And energy in the years ahead.

First again! Energy-Saver Loans are just one more way the Bank of Montreal is first with what you need. Whether you're planning to buy an energy-saving car, or make home improvements, see us first at the Bank of Montreal. But see us before June 10th.

The Lions, Pao-Pao And A Billy Joe

They arrived by car and bus and shank's mare, carrying their dreams in duffle bags with their cleats.

Saturday morning there were 190 of them, all lured to Huntington Beach, Calif., by word spread through the college and semi-pro grapevine that some team from Canada called the B.C. Lions was holding an allcomers football tryout camp.

They were kids, mostly 21 to 23 years old. Some had been drafted by National Football League teams and cut or lost in the training camp shuffle. Others had played college ball and waited around hopefully for pro calls that never came.

There was a scattering of refugees from the World Football League, a Walter Mitty or two, and a 28-year-old quarterback still refusing to believe the dream had died.

One by one they were weighed, measured, timed over 40 yards and moved along to agility drills.

The minimum standards were deliberately high, designed to eliminate the chaff in a hurry. On sprint times alone 100 were gone by midday—called aside, thanked for coming and sent down the road.

Saturday was for all comers, Sunday for survivors. Of the original 190, 32 were asked to come back for the second day. It would have been 30, but they felt sorry for the quarterback, and a running back considered too slow got another chance when he explained that he'd driven all night from Salt Lake City and arrived just in time for the sprint.

And now it got serious.

The 32 were matched for one-on-one drills, the best defensive backs against the top receivers, pattern after pattern. There was no hitting. There didn't have to be. These were kids going head-to-head for what might be the last chance to stick with any football team anywhere. It was war.

And it proved something.

"There is so much talent around, so much speed that you wouldn't believe it," says general manager Bob Ackles, who was there. "The conditions for the sprints were ideal and we found two kids — one a defensive back and one a wide receiver — who were clocked at under 4.4 seconds for the 40. One did a 4.39, the other a 4.35."

★ ★ ★

How fast is that? Well, if you ran those two against Leon Bright a nd all three were at the top of their form you'd have trouble splitting them without a watch. On the watch, Bright would finish third.

Naturally, pure speed in itself is not enough. Fifteen years ago and almost every year for a decade after there were players in camp faster than Willie Fleming. With Willie it was where he went, and how. But the game begins with quickness. Without it there is no hope — which is why the receiver and defensive back will be invited to the real training camp in July.

"Camps like this can be deceptive," Ackles admitted. "If we'd had the camp last year and he'd been in against some of the people we had this time, we might never have invited Ken Hinton to camp. We'd have considered his size and maybe cut him on that basis. Because there were all kinds of people there with the surface ability of a Hinton."

The Lions never considered the camp a gamble. For something less than $2,000 they got a look at a lot of football talent that doesn't always show up on the scouting reports. One nugget, one prospect, would more than justify the expense, as it did for Montreal Alouettes when they held a similar camp and found Vern Roberson.

What Ackles did learn was that they should have started even earlier than this. Even so, the initial results were encouraging.

Of the 192 hopefuls, four and possibly five will be brought to the main camp in Courtenay. The choice will not be easy. Four wide receivers would rate a look, but with Bright here and the chance of playing two highly remote they'll bring in only one. Similarly, only one of three defensive backs will make it — plus a defensive end, possibly a linebacker, and certainly one quarterback.

★ ★ ★

The quarterback's name is Joe Pao Pao — pronounced, Ackles assures me, "Pow! Pow! Like in Wonder Woman." He is a 6'1", 200-pound Samoan who played at Long Beach State, and a drop-back passer whose arm is of more than passing interest.

Chances are he won't make it past the pre-season games. Jerry Tagge isn't going anywhere and Gary Keithley hasn't broken into a sweat at the thought of college competition. But that's what the dreaming is all about.

If you were to wait a week and track down the 158 who were cut that first day, you'd find most of them doing what they were doing before the word went out: working, waiting, and hoping for another camp, another try, another chance. The dreams never die easily.

Meanwhile, there is the Lions' latest momentous signing.

The guy is a 5'11", 268-pound defensive lineman who asked for a tryout and modestly admitted that while he is a defensive lineman he can play guard, centre, offensive tackle, linebacker and fullback, as well as punt.

He is 27 years old, a WFL veteran from Arizona State. Terrorized opponents christened him The White Rhino. But it is his real name that tabs him as a cinch candidate for stardom.

I ask you, how can a guy miss being a great football player when his name is Billy Joe Winchester?

Expos Still Hot; Win Fifth In Row

By The Associated Press

They did, but they rediscovered their power from the most unlikely source.

Randy Lerch, who gets paid mostly to pitch, did some of the heavy hitting for the Phillies Monday night and led a 12-2 win over Chicago Cubs.

"After the way we hit the last three games, I guess I expected something," said manager Danny Ozark after watching his Phillies pound out 12 hits against the Cubs, including a two-run homer and an RBI double by Lerch.

The hitting display gave the Phillies "a more positive outlook," said Ozark. They had scored only eight runs while dropping a three-game series to the Expos.

"He hit a pretty good pitch," Ozark said of Lerch's homer in the third inning. "He looked a little like Ted Williams on that."

Lerch pitched as well as he hit, allowing the Cubs only six hits.

Meanwhile, the Expos kept right on going and lead the field in the National League East by 1½ games after defeating the St. Louis Cardinals 5-3.

In other National League games, Houston Astros beat San Diego Padres 4-3 in 10 innings and Pittsburgh Pirates defeated New York Mets, 4-2.

Dave Cash and Andre Dawson hit run-scoring singles off reliever Mark Littell in the seventh inning and started Montreal past St. Louis. The victory for the Expos was their fifth in a row and ninth in 11 games.

"I was kind of wondering if it was ever going to come or not," said May, who was making his fourth start and had an 0-1 record before Monday night.

The Phillies blew their game open with nine runs in the sixth, with Mike Schmidt's three-run homer capping the rally. Lerch struck out five and walked five while winning his second game in three decisions. Woodie Fryman, a former Philadelphia pitcher, lost his first decision.

Japanese Edge Island Juniors

Vancouver Island Rugby Union's representative Junior Crimson Tide dropped a narrow 35-32 decision to All-Nihon University of Osaka, Japan, in an international exhibition match Monday at Centennial Stadium.

All-Nihon, playing its first match of a tour, held a 19-6 lead at half time and were ahead 35-24 before Guy Prevost and Marty Mader closed the gap with two late tries for the Tide.

In preliminary matches, the Island's Ebb Tide downed an Over-40 Japanese side and a UVic side downed an All-Nihon team in a "social game".

The Japanese contingent moves to Vancouver for matches against the University of British Columbia on Wednesday and Thursday, then travels to Banff for a few days before returning home.

Lesser Lights Guide Leafs

By Canadian Press

Toronto Maple Leafs have been fortunate that some of their journeymen have carried a big share of the load so far in the Stanley Cup playoffs and now their continued success will depend even more on the lesser lights.

With the loss of star defenceman Borje Salming with a facial injury, the Leafs will be looking even more to players such as young Randy Carlyle and veteran Mike Pelyk to fill in on defence while the likes of Jack Valiquette, George Ferguson and Stan Weir will need to keep up their occasional sniping up front.

The Leafs depended heavily on 40-goal scorers Darryl Sittler and Lanny McDonald during the regular season while Ferguson had only seven goals, Valiquette eight and Weir 12.

In the playoffs, Ferguson scored three goals in the first game of the preliminary round against Los Angeles Kings. And Sunday night, Valiquette set up goals by Salming and Stan Weir in a 3-1 win that tied the best-of-seven quarter-final series against New York Islanders at 2-2.

"Valiquette has played exceptionally well in this series," said Leafs coach Roger Neilson. "Any time he's been on the ice, he's been very effective."

The Leafs go back to Uniondale, N.Y., for the fifth game tonight without Salming, their all-star defenceman, who was ruled out of action for 10 days by the injury suffered in Sunday's game.

Salming suffered a gash over the right eye and a broken nose and was taken to hospital where he was to remain for a week.

Neilson said defencemen Ian Turnbull and Brian (Blunt) Glennie will get more ice time while rookie Trevor Johansen will continue regular shifts with Turnbull. Carlyle, who has been on the bench, and Pelyk, will be rotated.

"Any time you lose a great player it's bound to have a psychological effect," said Neilson. "I just hope the guys come up big."

The rookie Leafs coach said his team plans to keep up the heavy hitting which he believes has been effective so far against the Islanders.

"We've said all along we were going to outhit them, which we have. They're too good a team not to fight back. I was hoping they would because the tougher this series is, the better chance we have to win."

Elsewhere, Philadelphia Flyers and Montreal Canadiens can wrap up their quarter-finals tonight. The Flyers hold a 3-1 lead over Buffalo Sabres with tonight's fifth game in Philadelphia. The Canadiens are also ahead 3-1 against Detroit Red Wings with tonight's fifth game in Montreal.

VEES QUIT SERIES

Clippers Too Violent, Dangerous

NANAIMO, B.C. (CP) — Penticton Vees pulled out of the British Columbia Junior Hockey League final series with Nanaimo Clippers Monday, saying the Clippers are too violent and dangerous to play.

The Vees left here 90 minutes before the fourth game of the best-of-seven series was to start, and about 800 fans and the Clippers turned up at the arena before the game was cancelled.

Nanaimo was leading the tier-two junior series 2-1, and BCJHL president Ernie McLean said a decision will be made today on the status of the teams and the series.

Penticton quit the series following a game Sunday that was delayed 55 minutes by a bench-clearing brawl 23 seconds into the game. Howie Walker of Penticton was given a match penalty for striking a linseman, who left the game complaining of dizziness.

Brent Bourne of the Vees received five stitches to the face after he was struck with a hockey stick wielded by a Nanaimo player outside his dressing room before the game started.

Police laid no charges following the game.

Vees coach Terry Martin said the players met for six hours with no team officials present before deciding to quit the series. He said the players wanted to bring the violence to the attention of the league. They felt it would be forgotten if they complained at the end of the finals.

"We understand that part of hockey includes fighting, rough body contact and a degree of intimidation," said Martin. "But we cannot condone the animal tactics of the Nanaimo Clippers hockey club."

Cliff McNabb, Nanaimo's general manager, said his team played a rough brand of hockey but added the Clippers paid for their style through penalties and injuries.

"We are the toughest hockey club in the junior league, bar none," said McNabb. "We live by it and we will die by it.

"They haven't got the guts," he said of the Vees.

McNabb offered to continue the remainder of the series in Penticton. He said he tried to talk to Martin about the situation, but the Vees coach refused.

During the series, Nanaimo was given 39 of 75 minor penalties, 11 of 22 majors, seven of 11 misconducts, three of five game misconducts and one of two match penalties.

McNabb said his club will lose at least $8,000 through lost gate receipts for the remainder of the series, and said he has already consulted his lawyer about taking legal action against the Vees.

McLean called the incident "the worst thing that has happened to the league," and he was upset at Penticton for quitting.

The league president said hockey is a rough game, but there are referees to keep order. He spent Monday arranging police protection at the arena and talked to the referee to ensure the game would be tightly controlled.

"But they (Penticton) are afraid to play them," said McLean.

He said he will consult with other league officers today before making any decisions.

KOMETS FACE ARREST ON BRAWL CHARGES

The newspaper said warrants issued by Muskegon County Prosecutor Gerald Warner charged Norris with felonious assault and Boland on a misdemeanor charge of assault and battery for participation in a bench-clearing incident during the International Hockey League playoff

Past Champs Lead Times Bowl Final

Three former winners made it into the list of bowlers who qualified to compete for cash and trophies in the women's tenpin rolloffs Sunday at Mayfair Lanes in the 15th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest.

Certain to be rated as favorites when the women clash at 1 p.m. are Lorna Pollock, Maureen King and Jessie Loo.

Pollock, who won the Bowler-of-the-Year crown in 1970, qualified in the first week; King, who topped the 1975 rolloff, qualified in the second week and Loo, who took the 1972 title, qualified in the 22nd week.

Although playoff experience is an advantage, the ability to roll high games is also an asset.

Coleen Blacklock, who rolled a 623 series to win Bowler-of-the-Week laurels in the 17th week, and Sally Yates, who topped her division with a 618 series in the 18th week, must also rate among the favorites for rolling the highest series in this season's contest.

But everyone who qualified in the 26-week event has a chance, because anyone can run into a hot streak.

Male tenpinners will also be rolling off at 1 p.m. Sunday at Mayfair while the fivepin qualifiers, both men and women, will compete May 7 at 1 p.m. at Town and Country Lanes.

Bowlers in the contest's four categories — men's and women's tenpins and men's and women's five-pin — qualified by rolling the highest three-game scratch series each week during regular league play on southern Vancouver Island.

The rolloffs will also be three-game scratch series with the winner in each division to receive a Times Trophy for permanent possession.

Any rolloff champion who is a daily subscriber to the Victoria Times will receive a bonus prize of $150, an increase of $50 from previous rolloffs.

Through the co-operation of the lane managers — Iver Hansen at Mayfair and Ken Jones at Town and Country — no bowling fees will be charged the finalists in this season's rolloffs.

ADD SIZE, MUSCLE TO LIST OF ASSETS

PRAGUE (CP) — Speed and youthful stamina are supposed to be the hallmarks of Team Canada '78 but you can't overlook size in assessing the club's prospects as it prepares for the world hockey championship.

It's especially true of the six-man defence, five of whose members stand six foot or taller. And although newcomer Dennis Kearns of Vancouver Canucks is relatively short at five-eight, he packs a lot of muscle into his ample 185 pounds.

The biggest man on the Canadian team is Pat Ribble of Atlanta Flames who stands six-four and weighs 210. Team-mate David Shand is six-two and 220, Brad Maxwell of Minnesota North Stars six-one and 184, Bob Picard of Washington Capitals six-two and 211, and Rick Hampton of Cleveland Barons six foot and 180.

Except for Kearns, who is 32, they're all in their early 20's. Rookies Maxwell and Picard are 20, Hampton and Shand 21 and Ribble will turn 24 on Wednesday.

There has been some concern that lack of experience might hurt the defence but it hasn't been apparent except in Sunday's 3-3 tie with the Czechoslovakian B team in which the players had some problems in situations where three skaters were defending against four.

They were remarkably disciplined in two wins over the Swedish national team and the 3-2 victory over the defending champion Czechoslovakian A team on Saturday.

"The defencemen have played pretty well," said head coach Harry Howell, a former National Hockey League star at that position himself. "But they are still learning the tricks of playing on the Wider European ice surface.

"They're backing up a little too soon when the other team gets possession in its own end. The opposing players start to come out and if the path isn't clear they circle back into their own end.

"We have to learn that as soon as they turn back we've got to move up to their blue line and start again. But if you've already given them 15 feet when they start coming out a second time, we can't challenge them until were 10 feet inside our blue line."

The Canadians, who open against Finland on Thursday, tried to practise the manoeuvre on Monday but were hampered by poor ice in an ancient arena in which they had to work out. They are back in the Sport Hall, site of the tournament, today.

Howell said another problem for the defence is handling the basketball-style pick plays used by the Europeans, especially on power plays.

One pick employed by the Swedes has a forward circling behind a point man who tries to screen a penalty-killer. As long as the player making the pick doesn't move, it's legal but often as not he'll commit interference and in European hockey a penalty is seldom called.

"If they tried that in the NHL there'd be a lot of sore ankles and sore wrists," said Howell, while admitting there is also a lot more interference going on now in the NHL than in the past.

"I think the European influence is taking over. And if you're going to go by the letter of the law there could be an interference call every minute over here."

Howell is resigned, however, to the likelihood that interference will continue to go unpunished expect in obvious cases, such as in front of the net where a player is cross-checked before a pass comes to him.

Walkout Cancels Walk-On

Promoters of the two-week Baltimore tournament walked out of the meeting after the commission refused to allow them to read a five-page statement.

"Despite repeated requests by the commission, the promoters of this event have consistently refused to co-operate with commission in order to secure all of the necessary personnel and equipment to assure a successful tournament," the commission said Monday.

The promoters' prepared statement accused the panel of continually harassing the promoters, treating them as criminal defendants. Joe Quinones, who headed Pro Productions, said the commission had an aggressive, hostile and threatening attitude toward his tournament.

The commission based its ruling on Quinone's failure to desposit the full $125,000 required in an escrow account by April 15, 1978, and on his presentation of a cheque for the balance which the commission found he didn't have sufficient funds to cover.

It arrived three days later, but Donald Emel, assistant treasurer of the Bank of Maryland, testified Monday that there wasn't sufficient funds in the Pro Productions account on April 18 to cover the amount of the cheque.

Monday's ruling upheld the April 18 decision to withdraw the sanction.

The promoter said the tournament couldn't continue, even if the sanction was restored, because of adverse publicity and because NBC cancelled its contract for television rights to the fights.

Quinones had been trying for several months to sign up more than 1,000 heavyweights with no previous pro experience to fight for $103,000 in prize money, including a $50,000 first prize.

"What's the matter with you! Can't you save that for during the commercials?"

Fergie Reassembling Game In Island Open

To most, Cec Ferguson's position in this year's Vancouver Island Open is as a favorite. The 27-year-old (fast closing in on 28) professional views his participation in a different light.

'It's a recovery time," said Ferguson, who moved into the second round of match play with an uneventual 3 and 2 Sunday victory over Dave Donaldson of Gorge Vale.

After "a bad stint" during a recent tour of Asia and Australiasa, Ferguson feels he needs to "put things back together again" before resuming his career as a touring pro. That resumption is due late next month when Ferguson again attempts to secure a playing card that would allow him to play the American circuit.

The Asian tour was "interesting, a great experience but an expensive lesson," Ferguson admitted. While he won "a bit of money," the 1975 Island and B.C. Open champ did not play well.

"The guys who did play well were guys who had been there before. . .like (Australians) Stewart Ginn and Brian Jones.

"In Hong Kong, it was a 90-minute bus ride from our hotel to the golf course. In Bangkok, it was a two-hour ride. If you knew what was in store for you, as Ginn and Jones did, you went out and hired a limousine. It was knowing those little things that made it easier."

"Six of 'em," Ferguson remembered, "and one on each floor of the hotel. Real bullets, real guards. If you hadn't been there before, it was a bit unnerving."

But the real problem, Ferguson bluntly admitted, was "our game." It took him two weeks to replace a broken driver, and more time thereafter to get used to the new club. His putting touch came and went, but Fergie wasn't at all pleased with the very short approach game.

He was three over par in his victory over Donaldson. Not impressive but reassuring. "I'm hitting the ball good. The confidence is returning and I've been chipping well because I worked on that during the past few weeks."

Where is there room for improvement?

"The short wedge and the putting . . . and then getting it all together. I feel it's coming, however. First thing I have to find is a putter I like. The new ones coming out on the market are all too light for my liking."

What's in the future?

"Apart from the PGA qualifying school, I really don't know," said Ferguson, who fulfills a two-year obligation to his Victoria sponsors this September.

For the time being, Ferguson will concentrate on the Island Open and getting back to the peak of his game.

SHORT CHIPS: Dave Mick's 4 and 2 victory over Dave McCall could be an omen for the Royal Colwood member. . .until Sunday, Mick had never beaten McCall in match play. . .Although one of the district's best, Mick has never won the Island Open. . .Former Island Open and B.C. Amateur champion Lawrie Kerr, beaten by Grant Milliken in the first round, is highly impressed with the interest in golf displayed by Nanaimo youngsters. . .On business in Nanaimo for most of the past week, Kerr says 3:15 in the afternoon is the start of a stampede towards the first tee. . .Sandy Harper's victory in the B.C. junior a few years ago could be one of the reasons. . .

Checking in with holes-in-one in recent days: Jack Stuart, on Colwood's seventh; Harry Leinweber, on Cedar Hill's sixth; Ron Williams, on the 15th at Cedar Hill, and Jack Betts, on the second at Victoria. . .Jim Flaherty scored a net 60 to win the Galt Cup competition at Oak Bay. . .Ken Soles and Ron Sallis teamed up for a net 72 to claim the Walton Cup at GLen Meadows. . .

BALLESTEROS GETS OPEN EXEMPTION

FAR HILLS, N.J. (Reuter) — Severiano Ballesteros of Spain has been granted a special exemption from qualifying for the 1978 United States Open golf championship, the U.S. Golf Association (USGA) has announced.

The USGA said the 21-year-old Spaniard has accepted and has entered the Open, to be played at the Cherry Hills Country Club in Englewood, Colo., June 15-18.

The USGA has the right to issue a maximum of three special exemptions from qualifying. Others this year have gone to Arnold Palmer and Billy Casper.

This increases the normal field of 150 golfers by that number.

Britannia Table Tennis Champions

VANCOUVER (CP) — Harry Chew and David Chiang of the host Britannia Secondary School captured the British Columbia schools table tennis championships held during the weekend.

Seven Auto Officials Die in Plane Crash

ARLINGTON, Ind. (AP) — A twin-engine plane carrying seven staff members of the United States Auto Club and two other persons has crashed and burned in a muddy field, killing all aboard, authorities said.

The racing officials were returning home to Indianapolis, 40 kilometres northwest of here, late Sunday following a race in New Jersey, USAC officials said. Also on board were the pilot and a member of the USAC medical staff.

USAC identified the victims as Frank DelRoy, long-time chairman of the USAC technical committee; Ray Marquette, USAC vice-president in charge of public affairs; Shim Malone, head of USAC's midget car division and chief starter at many races throughout the country; Stan Worley, USAC registrar; Don Peabody, head of the USAC sprint car division; Judy Phillips, artist and typist who helped direct the publication of USAC's newsletter; Russ Teegarden, assistant USAC technical chairman; Dr. Bruce White, a member of USAC's medical staff; and Don Mullendore, the pilot.

The aircraft went down in a 30-acre cornfield after passing near the farmhouse of Gene Gardner, just east of the crash site.

"I knew the plane was in trouble," said Gardner, "The engines were wide open like it was in a power dive. It was really screaming. there was a large thud and then a boom. When we looked out, there was a fireball."

MACS BACKED

Victoria McDonalds have been assured of continued support by their sponsor in the Western Canada Junior "A" Lacrosse League.

McDonalds Bakery, the Vancouver-owned subsidiary of McGavin Toastmaster Ltd., announced Monday it would stop production in Victoria May 26 because of financial difficulties.

Bob Reid, general-manager of McDonalds lacrosse club, which won the Canadian championship Minto Cup in 1976, said Monday the team will receive $3,500, the same amount it received in 1977, and "there was no indication from McDonalds that this will be the last year of what has been an excellent sponsorship. The company contacted us last Thursday to assure us of its support."

McDonalds Bakery has sponsored the lacrosse team for the past 15 years.

All Eight WHA Teams Expected Back: Baldwin

NEW YORK (CP) — Howard Baldwin, president of the World Hockey Association, said Monday he expects all eight WHA teams to be operating next season.

The WHA's board of trustees met for five hours Monday to discuss what was described as "maintenance" business.

"It was just an update on each franchise, that's all," Baldwin said. "Each franchise looked pretty good. We feel we're going in the right direction, but we're not without our problems. I wouldn't kid you on that."

Asked whether any of the franchises such as Houston Aeros, which lost $2 million this season, will be dropping out, Baldwin replied: "No, everybody including Houston is in."

Baldwin disputed reports that the Houston owners had said the club wouldn't play in the WHA next season.

"No, they really didn't say that. They announced they were trying to get in the NHL but they didn't announce that they wouldn't play in the WHA."

Baldwin conceded that his renewed efforts last February to set up a merger between the WHA and the National Hockey League had failed.

He said the WHA owners now are more concerned with building up their franchises.

"We're doing it, some better than others."

Cinderella Series Set

CALGARY (CP) — With the Memorial Cup playoffs in Sudbury and Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., scheduled to start in 10 days, the Western Canada Hockey League is gearing up for the best-of-seven final between New Westminster Bruins and Billings Bighorns.

The New Westminster-Billings final, beginning in New Westminster Wednesday, may be termed the "Cinderella series" as neither club was given great odds for advancing to the finals ahead of regular-season leaders Brandon Wheat Kings and Portland Hawks, says the league office.

Moreover, neither team placed any of its players among the league's top 15 scorers or had its goaltenders win the league netminding crown.

The second game of the series will be played at the Coliseum in Vancouver Thursday, with the series shifting to Billings for the next three games Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

Three Rivers has won the Quebec championship while Peterborough Petes and Hamilton Fincups meet in a seven-game series for the Ontario crown.

World Cup Preamble Like A Three Stooges Comedy

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — The Argentine military regime's efforts to use the 1978 World Soccer Cup as a way to improve its tarnished international image are taking on the aspects of a Three Stooges comedy.

Most sports fans in North America, where soccer is still in its infancy, have only a vague notion of what the World Cup is all about. But in the rest of the world, hundreds of millions will be glued to their television sets when the 25-day competition gets under way June 1.

Sixteen of the world's best national teams will be competing in the 1978 World Cup, held every four years. The defending champion is West Germany.

Although Argentina was chosen to be host for this World Cup long before the ruling military junta seized power in a 1976 coup, the regime sees this sporting extravaganza in political terms.

Government officials, complaining of a left-wing campaign against Argentina because of alleged human rights violations, say the World Cup will allow people from all over the world to see "the real Argentina." The government is spending $700 million to bankroll the event.

"Military regimes in Latin America can put up with criticism about repression and human rights, but they can't stand to be the butt of jokes. That sends them into orbit," says a long-time diplomat.

Already, however, people are poking fun at the local World Cup organizing committee, headed by a retired Argentine army general and an active duty navy admiral.

World Cup pamphlets and accreditation forms in triplicate and even sextuplet—in tortured and sometimes butchered English—have sparked a local controversy.

"The five official languages for this year's competition are clearly Portuguese, French, German, Spanish and gibberish," British journalist Brian James observed in a column.

"Our purpose is not only to receive the pressmen and to pay attention to them in such event, but the borning of fondness and loving towards our country and everything Argentine. We like it would be endless."

Eric Weil, sports writer for the English-language Buenos Aires Herald, complained in a column last week that his British journalist friends had sent their accreditation forms to him so he could fill them out. It seems they didn't understand the English-language instructions.

James's column was reprinted by the Herald and provoked several letters to the editor, one of them from a "worried soccer fan" who exclaimed, tongue in cheek, that terrorists disguised as translators had obviously infiltrated the World Cup committee.

Earlier this month the committee mailed out forms granting credentials to thousands of journalists. The bulky envelope also contained a form—the translations refer to this as a "formulary"—which had to be filled out in quadruplicate, detailing communications needs for each journalist.

Unfortunately, the packages were mailed out after the March 27 deadline had passed for such request.

Despite frantic efforts to install new circuits for the Cup, Argentina's telephone system is still among the world's worst.

"I think we rank slightly above Uganda—but I'm not sure," one local businessman complained.

Siemens, the West German communications company, is installing many facilities for the World Cup. But at its local offices half of its 20 telephone lines are on the blink.

"And if it rains just four drops, they all go out," said an employee.

Argentina's main airports are being enlarged and modernized to accommodate expected World Cup trade. Work is being carried out at Ezeiza International Airport just outside of Buenos Aires, where the simultaneous arrival of just two jumbo jets currently results in delays of several hours to get through immigration and customs.

Last week a planeload of passengers from nearby Paraguay arrived at dusk just as a short circuit blew the lights out inside the new terminal. Immigration officers kept lighting matches to see the passports they were stamping.

What do you demand from a car rental company?

Everything. And why shouldn't you? Avis did a lot of research during the past year and we discovered that the things you demand are the very things we've been trying harder to offer you for over a decade.

Here's what you can expect from Avis.

1. Fast and friendly handling of your rental and return of the car at all our locations. We call it counter intelligence.
2. Reservations that are honoured.
3. The type of car you asked for.
4. Cleanliness. Our cars are cleaned 'til they sparkle, ashtrays and all, before each rental.
5. Car care—safety and mechanical reliability. Read the check list hanging on the rear-view mirror. Our cars get quite a going over.
6. Every Avis car comes with a full tank of gas. You only pay for the gas you use.
7. Efficient corporate billing systems. Four payment options and Avis Executive cards to speed things up.
8. Low weekend rates and lots of other specials.
9. Courtesy. Always. We like demanding customers. But most of all, we like satisfied ones.

Call your travel agent or Avis to reserve your car. Avis is in the Yellow Pages.

Vote Could Alter Status of Israel

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — Israel's future status in international soccer may be decided in a crucial vote at the congress of the European Union of Football Associations (UEFA) in Istanbul later this month.

Five West European UEFA members have proposed a change in the statutes aimed at permitting the admission of Israel to UEFA although it is a non-European country.

The change was proposed by West Germany, France, Holland, Sweden and Switzerland after Israel was kicked out of the Asian Football Federation in defiance of statutes laid down by the world body of soccer, the International Federation of Football Associations (FIFA). Subsequently, a bid by Israel itself to join UEFA was turned down.

After the 1976 expulsion, FIFA threatened to suspend the Asian group.

But when the final ultimatum expired in January this year, Fifa softened its attitude and agreed to meet Asian group officials to seek a solution.

"Whatever happens in Istanbul, we still have stern matters of principle to resolve with the AFC," said FIFA press officer Rene Courte of Luexembourg. "No continental confederation has a right to expel a member nation without valid reason."

Juan de Fuca, Saanich Score Football Wins

Robert Dorval set the pace for Juan de Fuca with three touchdowns and a single while Terry Hayward added two TDs and a single. Neil Ford scored the touchdown for Victoria.

Ken Smith scored two TDs and Jeff Zonneveld counted the other major for Saanich while Ramie Pool scored a TD for Gordon Head.

In another development, six-foot-four John James, a 215-pound lineman for Oak Bay Farmer Construction of the Vancouver Island Juvenile Football League, has been awarded a scholarship to Simon Fraser University.

A Tourist Warning

Warning: Travelling in Mexico may be hazardous to your health — the B.C. ministry of Consumer and Corporate Affairs.

That message — while never likely to appear — is one Delta Socred MLA Walter Davidson feels should be placed on advertisements and in brochures soliciting British Columbians to visit Mexico.

Davidson raised the point during question period Monday when he discussed the the murders of two of his constituents holidaying in Mexico last week.

He asked Consumer Affairs Minister Rafe Mair to take the necessary steps to have such warnings issued.

But Mair said there is no provincial statute under which he could take action since it is a federal matter.

Mair said later he is appalled by the Mexican situation and has sent a letter to External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson asking him to take the matter up with Mexican authorities.

Davidson said later a warning like the one on cigarette packages warning of the health hazard of smoking, should be placed on all Mexican tourist advertising.

This may have already started.

A Times survey of local travel agents shows the number of travellers booking Mexican vacations is dropping.

The dip comes despute the fact that Mexico is considered a prime travel bargain since the Canadian dollar has fared much better against the peso than against the U.S. dollar.

Agents say travellers are now booking trips to Hawaii although many originally wanted to go to Mexico. The reports of dangers have scared them off, one agent said.

Tax Junk Food

The Social Credit whip in the legislature Monday urged Finance Minister Evan Wolfe to eliminate the five-per-cent sales tax on food supplements and boost it on junk foods.

George Mussallem (Dewdney) told the legislature during debate on the budgetary estimates of the finance ministry that the tax on vitamins, for example, should be eliminated.

But on junk foods such as puffed rice, it should be increased.

He said that vitamins are taxed in B.C. but not in Ontario while chocolate bars are taxed in Ontario and not in B.C.

"Chocolate is very bad for children's teeth and very bad for adult's teeth, and should be avoided."

"Yet we supply these substances without tax on the assumption that there is substantial food requirements for people — and there is not."

Mussallem said puffed rice is junk food because an experiment at the University of B.C. showed that cattle fed puffed rice would have died if they had not been fed other food.

Amalgamation if Necessary . . .

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis said Monday he is prepared to support a study into amalgamation of Greater Victoria municipalities provided two or more of the municipalities ask for it.

However, it's unlikely he'll get any takers.

Victoria Mayor Mike Young said it is more important to complete other studies already under way than to tackle the amalgamation issue. The studies he referred to include regional policing, incorporation of western communities and a regional review.

Both Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith and Esquimalt Mayor Art Young have been staunchly oppposed to amalgamation.

Only Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier appears ready to seek a study but only to settle the question once and for all.

Curtis said he was not trying to impose a study on the municipalities. That would be contrary to the government's philosophy, he declared.

He said he does not have the statutory authority to enforce amalgamation anywhere in the province.

MP Lashes Gov't For 'Criminal' Aid

OTTAWA (CP) — A Conservative MP said Monday credit from the Crown's Export Development Corp., (EDC) is indirectly helping international revolutionaries and criminals.

Donald Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich) told the Commons the EDC is helping Cuba convert sugar cane fiber into paper.

"Through this assistance in its industrial development, Cuba is being freed to send troops throughout Africa causing serious problems for established authorities there."

He also said EDC has extended a $1.5 billion line of credit to Algeria, a country which harbors airplane hijackers.

He made his comments during second-reading debate on a bill to give more money to the corporation, which helps promote the sale of Canadian products abroad through loans and guarantees to foreign customers if the money is spent in Canada.

Conservative and New Democratic Party MPs criticized the corporation for giving credit to other countries when the money is needed in Canada, and for setting up foreign companies which will eventually compete with Canadian companies.

Trade Minister Jack Horner said last week that EDC helps Canadian industry sell abroad and thus creates jobs. He said last year EDC was responsible for 200,000 existing or created jobs.

Munro said Canada is using $1.2 billion to help Algeria form a merchant marine.

"It's absolutely ludicrous that we are creating a merchant marine for someone else and we are not doing it for ourselves," he said.

Court Appoints B.C. Tel Referee

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver lawyer Paul Fraser has been appointed chairman of a joint standing committee on contracting out and technological change at British Columbia Telephone Co.

He was appointed by Chief Justice Nathan Nemetz of the B.C. Supreme Court under provisions of the settlement report by Justice Henry Hutcheon which paved the way for the Feb. 12 end of the telephone company's 81-day strike-lockout.

The company and the Telecommunication Workers Union couldn't agree on a chairman so the decision went to the chief justice.

Fraser said he would meet both sides this week.

Under terms of the settlement, each side has four representatives on the committee. If they cannot agree on how to handle an issue, Fraser will be asked to make a binding decision.

Tories Choose Carney

VANCOUVER (CP) — Economic consultant Pat Carney was nominated Monday to contest the next federal election in Vancouver Centre for the Progressive Conservative Party, defeating former MP Douglas Jung.

Carney, 43, who received 329 votes to 223 for Jung, accused the Liberal government of "taking us perilously close to national bankruptcy."

Jung was first elected in Vancouver Centre in 1957 and stretched his victory margin to more than 10,000 votes in the Diefenbaker sweep of 1958. He was defeated by Ron Basford by 894 votes in 1962 when the Liberals returned to power with a minority government.

Grudging Apologies From 2 MPs For Language

OTTAWA (CP) — A Liberal and a Conservative made grudging apologies Monday for strong language in the Commons. They had been asked to do so by Speaker James Jerome who said MPs should stop getting personal.

Finance Minister Jean Chretien and Conservative House Leader Walter Baker were asked to withdraw remarks they made last week, which Jerome said compromised the dignity of the House.

Baker had said Transport Minister Otto Lang had questionable ethics.

Chretien sent fellow members into gales of laughter by saying: "Perhaps it was not dishonest, but it was not the truth he was telling."

Jerome was so unsure Chretien had withdrawn his accusation that he had to ask Chretien to repeat his apology.

Baker was asked by Jerome to apologize for saying last week that Transport Minister Otto Lang has the ethics of an alley cat.

"I listened to the minister last week when he frothered in his prissy way . . ." began Baker, but he was interrupted by cat-calls from Liberal MPs.

Baker said Lang had prompted the attack by his gross misrepresentation of Conservative Leader Joe Clark.

"I do not intend to sit idly by and allow this to happen, especially when such a personal and vindictive attack comes from such an empty vessel in such an empty government," Baker said.

He said Lang likes to jump into the ring and provoke a fight, "but he starts to blubber when he's hit."

Jerome interrupted, saying he saw nothing wrong with vigorous and strident language between members on opposite sides of the House, but felt these personal character attacks were adding nothing to the debate.

"I don't suppose anyone in the House is about to fall over in a faint at the sound of the words used on either occasion, but when we get into these personal reflections, we always have unfortunate incidents."

Jerome said he is not personally offended by either Baker's or Chretien's words, but suggested they be withdrawn from the record just to be safe.

"We have to adhere to certain standards of language and conduct to guard the sense of dignity and decorum of the House now and for all time," Jerome said.

He suggested that MPs present their cases against fellow members as critically as they wished, but let the ethics of members be judged from the record.

Gold Coin On Unity Proposed

OTTAWA (CP) — Supply Minister Jean-Pierre Goyer caught a roomful of MPs off guard Monday by announcing government plans to issue a gold unity coin in September.

"Can you believe it?" asked Sinclair Stevens, Progressive Conservative finance critic, in an interview. "That's the daftest idea I've heard in a long time."

Several MPs appeared astounded when Goyer made the announcement at a meeting of the Commons finance committee.

The coins, each worth $100, would be the first in a series of gold coins, each with its own theme.

"Because of political circumstances, it might be good to enhance the value of Canada as a country and stir up public opinion around the theme of national unity. I don't see why anyone would object to this."

Long Waits, Bus Shuttles: Via Rail Chaos Predicted

OTTAWA (CP) — Train travellers face a summer of long inconvenient waits and bus shuttles under national schedules adopted by the publicly-owned passenger service Via Rail, Opposition MPs said Monday.

"It's going to cause chaos," predicted Jack Murta (PC—Lisgar) in the Commons.

He asked Transport Minister Otto Lang to justify the "inconvenience and confusion" that would accompany 12-hour waits for connecting trains in Winnipeg and bus shuttles between North Bay and Sudbury, Ont., for passengers heading West.

"Give it a chance," replied Lang.

"Obviously, if one wants to make a change from the originating CN trackage to a Canadian Pacific destination, then certain changes and waits are required."

Lang urged MPs to "avoid narrow carping criticism . . . about some of the difficulties which are bound to occur."

Opposition concerns were prompted by proposed June 1 schedules by Via Rail, the company that has taken over the passenger operations of both CP Rail and Canadian National Railways.

On June 1, the company plans to eliminate the CP train that now leaves Montreal daily for the West and the CN westbound train from Toronto. That means, for example, that any Montreal passenger wanting to go to, say, Regina on the CP line would first have to travel to Toronto and catch a CP train. If not, he could take the CN train to North Bay, Ont., then take the bus to Sudbury, Ont., where he could catch the westbound CP train. Or he could take the CN train to Winnipeg, arrive at 11:30 a.m., and catch the 8:15 p.m. CP train to Regina.

"Via Rail is going to get off to a bad start," Murta said.

But Lang said the changes could mean tax savings of $30-$40 million.

As well, he added, "you cannot go to everywhere from everywhere in a direct way."

"It's impossible to do what everyone might like," Lang said.

Later, former Conservative leader Robert Stanfield asked what steps Via Rail plans to take to change fares, which now are more expensive on CP than on CN.

Lang said Via is attempting to get the railways and the regulatory Canadian transport commission to agree to one uniform fare schedule between points.

If Via was unable to get such agreement, passengers would simply have to pay the kind of different prices they now pay. CN, for instance, now offers a round-trip excursion to Vancouver from Montreal for $146. CP Rail, which has no excursion rate, charges $278 for the same trip.

Stanfield said Via will end up "with a substantial black eye" if the rate structures are not changed by June 1.

Indian Brotherhood Building Alliances

OTTAWA (CP) — The National Indian Brotherhood, the country's most powerful Indian political group, is quietly building international alliances that could provide it considerable clout in its struggle for self-determination.

Already a major force behind the World Council of Indigenous People (WCIP), the brotherhood is participating in forming an impressive, as yet unnamed, United-States-based alliance.

It also is establishing relations with the Council of Energy Resource Tribes, a U.S. coalition of 25 tribes with substantial coal, uranium, oil and gas holdings. This group is working to give Indians greater control over their resources and to use them for economic and political gain.

The unnamed alliance, tentatively set to meet next month in Denver to make more formal arrangements, is designed to bring all major Indian political forces together against government policies not favorable to Indians.

Included in the group of 10 are the National Congress of American Indians, the international Treaty Council, the militant American Indian Movement (AIM) and the large and wealthy Navajo Nation.

The energy council tribes and the alliance are most concerned with U.S. problems, especially the white backlash and anti-Indian legislation growing from successful Indian court battles over land claims and fishing rights. There likely will be, however, important spinoffs for Canadian Indians.

The alliance already has decided there is no Canada-U.S. border in terms of Indian affairs, says Arnold Goodleaf, special assistant to brotherhood president Noel Starblanket.

"We have a feeling that everything that happens in the U.S. eventually happens in Canada," Goodleaf said in a recent interview.

He expressed concern about U.S. legislative proposals to abrogate Indian treaties and to effectively quash land claims. The Canadian Indian affairs department has had officials in the U.S. looking at such legislation, he says.

"If this legislation goes through we can be sure that same thing will happen here in four or five years."

'INJUN' IMAGE IRKS METIS MP

OTTAWA (CP) — The government should ban the sale of cheap souvenirs which degrade Indians, MP Wally Firth (NDP—Northwest Territories) said Monday.

Firth, a Metis, said he raised the matter because of a small plastic flask for sale in Ottawa stores for $1.59.

On the front are the words FIRE WATER and a "degrading image of an Indian guzzling from a bottle," Firth said in a statement.

A gauge on the back measures the quantity of liquid in the flask. The various stages are marked as the flask is emptied: "throat dry, whistle wet, feelum better, better yet, wantum sing, tonsils tickled, wow, brave, you're pickled, and dead injun."

Firth said this is only an example of the problems that certain Canadians face.

Firth said Human Rights Commissioner Gordon Fairweather agrees that the store selling the flask shows a discriminatory attitude towards native people, but said the Canadian Human Rights Act does not prohibit sale of such objects.

BELL-ARAB PACT ANTI-ISRAEL?

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Monday he has called for an examination of a recent $1.1 billion agreement between Bell Canada and Saudi Arabia to see whether it discriminates against Jews.

Trudeau told Herb Gray (L—Windsor West) he asked his officials to look into the matter last week and hopes to provide answers about it soon.

Gray said the contract includes a statement by Bell Canada that neither it nor any of its subsidiaries has commercial dealings with Israel.

Gray said last week that if this is a condition of the deal, it would mean Bell Canada is complying with the Arab boycott of Israel. He said the government also is implicated because it is providing both financial and administrative support to the telephone company.

The Export Development Corp., a Crown corporation, announced last week it would insure up to 90 per cent of Bell's risk in the project.

Stanfield vs. PM In Mount Royal, Crosbie's Joke

OTTAWA (CP) — Could former Progressive Conservative leader Robert Stanfield defeat Prime Minister Trudeau in Trudeau's home riding of Mount Royal in the next election?

That was the scenario John Crosbie (PC—St. John's West) drew in the Commons Monday night.

To the appreciative laughter of other Conservative MPs, Crosbie suggested that Stanfield "now is bilingual and he is ready for anything."

He noted with regret that Stanfield is not running in the next election "to take his rightful place in the cabinet of Canada."

"Maybe we can persuade him to change his mind and run down in Westmount (Mount Royal) and trounce the prime minister right where it hurts, right in his own district."

Stanfield laughed and even jokingly thumped his desk in his own honor as Crosbie departed from debate veered off into high praise of Stanfield.

Stanfield, Crosbie said, has "more gumption in his little finger than all 33 1-2 members" of the Trudeau cabinet. The half cabinet minister is the one in the Senate, he said, apparently referring to Revenue Minister Joe Guay who was recently named a senator.

Crosbie, Conservative industry, trade and commerce critic, turned his guns on a favorite target, former Conservative colleague Jack Horner, now industry minister.

How Horner became so arrogant so fast is one of the mysteries of the century, Crosbie said.

Big Breast Worshippers Chauvenistic, Dimwitted?

DEAR ABBY: How dare you perpetuate the myth that men prefer women with big breasts? In a recent column in which you offer men tips on how to make themselves more "lovable," you said, "If she's flat-chested and a 38-D walks by, pretend not to notice."

Abby, there are men who prefer women with small breasts ("flat-chested," according to your 38-D standards) — my husband among them. He doesn't have to "pretend not to notice."

If you had done a little research, you would have known that men who prefer women with small breasts are more mature, intelligent and less chauvinistic than the big-breast worshippers.

Please stop trying to make me, and others like me, feel that we are inferior and unattractive, and that any man will slobber himself into a stupor over a 38-D! — Small and Sexy

DEAR S AND S: My apologies. But in most surveys I've seen in which men were asked to describe their "ideal woman," the 38-D's were way out in front.

DEAR ABBY: My grandson, who is 33 and a physician, is quite religious. Every Friday night he serves his two sons, ages 3 and 5, wine with dinner, and they say a prayer.

I wasn't too concerned about this until the 5-year-old visited us and asked if he could have some wine. Of course we didn't give it to him, but I started to worry that the children could be developing a taste for wine at an early age and eventually become alcoholic. I read somewhere that this could happen.

Is there some way I can convey this message to my grandson without offending him? (P.S. He's a Scorpio and doesn't take criticism very well.) — Great-Grandmother

DEAR GRANDMOTHER: Tell him in a loving, non-critical way that his son asked for wine in your home. As a physician he should know the dangers of giving a child too much wine too often. (P.S. Scorpios are also quick-learners.)

DEAR ABBY: I've been going with Adam for two years, and I always thought his family liked me. Adam's brother is getting married next Sunday and Adam will be an usher in the wedding party. I am very upset because I wasn't invited to the wedding. Who does the inviting anyway?

HURT

DEAR HURT: The bride and her family "does the inviting." But the groom and his family are also allowed to invite a certain number of guests.

If Adam had requested it, you probably would have been invited. But it's possible that they had to limit the number of guests, or maybe the ushers were asked to "escort" the bridesmaids, so Adam had a "duty" date. Ask him.

With all I read about arthritis and rheumatism, I can't make heads or tails about the difference. I know I have arthritis. Does that mean I also have rheumatism? — Mr. E. McM.

Dear Mr. McM.:

You're not alone in your confusion. Many people use the term interchangeably when, in reality, they are distinctly different.

Rheumatism is a general term which widely describes pain, tenderness and soreness of the muscles, the joints and the ligaments. The American Rheumatism Association lists about 100 different conditions that could be sub-classified under rheumatism.

One of the major subdivisions of rheumatism is arthritis. Arthritis itself has two major divisions. The first, rheumatoid arthritis, refers to chronic inflammation of the joints and the tissues around them. This type of arthritis seems to occur about three times more frequently in women than in men. Salicylate, the basic ingredient in aspirin, is still one of the most effective ways of treating rheumatoid arthritis. Many other drugs have, in recent years, been effective in controlling the pain and discomfort. The research that is accumulating everywhere seems to portend greater hope for the control of this type of arthritis.

The second large classification of arthritis is called "osteoarthritis." This chronic, sometimes incapacitating, condition more often occurs in the older age group and in those who are excessively overweight. Degenerative changes within the joints and hard, knobby enlargement of the joints cause deformities which may interfere with the ease and freedom of movement. The wrists, the spine, the shoulders and the feet are most usualy affected. Here, too, new drugs have been beneficial. Ultrasonic vibrations, massage, mud packs and water therapy can offer relief. Cortisone is, of course, used with great discrimination by the doctor in all forms of arthritis.

Probably the most remarkable strides in surgery have been made in the replacement of joints that are unworkable because of long-standing, chronic, degenerative changes.

There is constant and endless research all over the world that is aimed at learning more about methods of prevention of all forms of arthritis. The horizon of medicine is dotted with heartening evidence that the ever-present painful condition of arthritis may one day be eradicated.

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Canada's oldest convict got a break this week when he was given an absolute discharge on a conviction of escaping from prison.

Vincent (Ace) Hamel, 81, who has been in and out of prison since 1930, now is free to bargain with the parole board for his release.

His lawyer, David Cole, said the parole board had promised Hamel a hearing after the charge was dealt with by the court.

Hamel had pleaded guilty to a charge of escaping from the minimum-security Pittsburgh institution March 26, after which he lived the life of a free man in Toronto for 13 days.

Hamel left the prison one week before he was to have to be paroled. He told the court Friday the only reason he left was because he had to agree to sign over control of his savings of $16,320 to the parole service as a condition of his release.

After leaving the prison, he walked to Highway 15 where a woman offered him a ride to Kingston, Hamel said.

He was dropped off at a city hotel where he stayed overnight before catching a Toronto-bound bus the next morning.

Hamel said his savings were in Toronto and he also had $10,000 coming to him as a result of his son's death in the Korean war.

He has made money in the past by buying rundown cottages and reselling them for profit, he told the court.

"I'll have enough money to last me the rest of my life."

Hamel, who has been sentenced to a total of 63 years in various prisons for different offences, will appear before the parole board within the next two weeks.

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS®
...it tells you how wild mushroom gathering

A favorite springtime tradition for many families is those long, pleasant walks through the newly awakened countryside to gather wild edible mushrooms . . . especially the choice morels.
Many old-timers begin to look for these popular fungi when the oak leaves become "the size of a mouse's ear," but the elegant table fare can generally be found in the U.S. and parts of Canada from the latter part of April through May. After a warm rain, morels will frequently pop up in old orchards, forests, swampy areas, or any place which boasts a rich, damp, and well-aerated soil.
Although members of the Morchella family vary in color from cream or dingy cinnamon to gray and black, their deeply pitted surface makes them easy to identify. A careful amateur should have no trouble distinguishing this edible "sponge-like" fungus from the so-called "false morels" (the Helvella family) which have a ridged and wrinkled cap that resembles brain tissue. Even so, it's still a good idea to carry a mushroom guidebook along on foraging expeditions until you're POSITIVE you can recognize and distinguish between both kinds.
Once you've gathered a large quantity of the genuine morels, saute them, toss them into soups and salads, use them in your regular recipes . . . or dry 'em so you can add a springtime flavor to warm-me-up meals next winter.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In duplicate bridge, the fulfillment of a lowly one-no-trump contract (when everybody else failed to fulfill it) is worth more in match points than the fulfillment of a vulnerable grand slam contract if everybody else also fulfills the latter. The reason, of course, is that in duplicate bridge you score one point for each pair whose score you beat; and a half point for each pair whose score you tie.

SOUTH

♡ Q 8 7
◇ A Q 4 2
♣ J 6 4

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Nine of ♠.

On West's nine of spades opening lead both dummy and Easy played low, South winning the trick with his jack. At trick two declarer came up with a nicely conceived deceptive play: he led a low club towards dummy's ten-spot! The purpose of this play was to implant in the opponent's minds the thought that he was interested in developing a club suit; and thereby, to dissuade them from leading clubs.

West played low on the club lead, and East's king captured the trick. East, having obvserved that his partner had opened the spade nine from what was obviously a short suit, concluded that the reason why partner hadn't opened his long suit was that partner's long suit was hearts, dummy's bid suit.

So, at trick three, in an attempt to establish West's presumed heart suit, East banged down the heart king. Declarer permitted this card to win, since if he took it, there would be no way of reaching dummy to cash the to-be-established heart suit.

When West's discouraging deuce of hearts appeared on East's lead of the king, East abandoned hearts and shifted to a diamond. But it was belated, for declarer now had his seven tricks: two spades, four hearts and the diamond ace. Had East returned a club (or a diamond) at trick three, the contract would have been defeated. But how could East have diagnosed the true situation?

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Wednesday, April 26
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Meditate. Synthesize information. More is available than might be apparent on surface. Cancer, Capricorn figure in picture — and so does the number 2. Journeys, distance, secrets, confidential material — these command personal spotlight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Adapt to changing conditions. Study Aries message. Give full play to intellectual curiosity. Examine and explore, demand answers instead of excuses. Dig deep for pay dirt. Yes, an "occult" experience proves valid.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Tempo slows — go with tide. Don't force issues — or people. Be thorough. Check fine print. Contracts, legal agreement, partnership and marriage proposals dominate. Stick with number 4. Individual who speaks frankly, minus flattery, has your best interests at heart.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You receive offer — means you take it and leave home base for a time, reject it and hold tight for better position. Welcome change, challenge, stimulation. Read, write, travel, submit concepts, formats. Gemini, Virgo persons figure prominently.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Make adjustment within family circle. Be diplomatic, but get desires across in meaningful manner. Taurus, Libra figure in scenario. In matters of speculation, stick to number 6. Element of timing — or luck — rides with you. Romance also is in picture. You will be flattered, wined and dined!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Land, real estate, basic values — find out where you stand and become fully aware of potential. Pisces person is in picture. Overcome temptation to see places, people only as you wish they might be. Legal agreement works in your behalf if you don't jump at first offer.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Message provides encouragement, necessary information, green light. Bring priorities into focus. Don't scatter forces. Relative implores, chides. Key is to maintain balance, self-esteem and humor. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure prominently.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Financial matter that had been "hening on" is settled. Let go. Give yourself a change to reaffirm convictions, re-establish base of operations. Aries, Libra figure prominently. Now is time to enlarge, to prove that what you offer has wide appeal. Yes, Aries is in picture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Take lead, exercise independence of thought, action. Creativity is highlighted. Stick to your own style, beliefs. Members of opposite sex find you especially attractive. Significant changes work in your favor. New people in your life prove beneficial, especially Leo.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Look behind scenes for answers. Older family member holds key to security. Know it and don't permit pride to block progress. Cancer is in picture and so is another Capricorn. Check messages. Beware of "double talk."

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Romantic interlude adds spice to your life. Some fond wishes come true. Be flexible. Travel, writing, accelerated social life are on agenda. Popularity increases. Someone dubs you "Gregarious Aquarius"! Long-range plan or project comes into sharp, clear focus.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Financial bonanza may be in picture. You win by doing what comes naturally. Key number is 4. Break from restriction, tradition, hide bound rules and regulations. Create your own traditions and escape hatch.

IF APRIL 26 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you make new starts in new directions this year. You feel revitalized; you are rid of burden and way is open to creativity — and love. July will be your most memorable month of 1978. Capricorn, Cancer persons play important roles in your life. You are loyal, obstinate, strong in convictions and capable of accumulating a fortune.

GARDENING

New Plants Made from Old

Occasionally a large branch is broken off a tree or a shrub when construction work is being done nearby, or an automobile out of control crashes into the garden.

When this happens the gardener is dismayed, but suddenly brightens at the thought of pushing the broken branch into the ground and growing another tree or shrub as beautiful as the original.

It is true that many ornamental plants are grown from pieces taken from another plant, but these are cuttings not branches. In fact, the cuttings from many ornamental and fruiting trees will not root, so the plants have to be propagated by grafting or budding to a suitable rootstock.

This method of propagation is the reason so many gardeners are disappointed when given a root sucker by a kindly neighbor or friend. The resulting plant is the same as the rootstock which can be quite different to the named variety that was admired in the next garden.

Getting back to the broken branch; should the damage be caused in late summer it may be possible to take some cuttings and try rooting them.

The cuttings must be wood of the same season's growth which ripened to the point of cracking half-way through when bent into the shape of a hairpin. If it only cracks and flattens it is not ripe enough to root, and if it snaps and falls off it is too mature.

It is a waste of time trying to root cuttings of fruit trees. Cuttings of rhododendrons need a propagating case with controlled heat and moisture, even then they may keep their foliage in good condition for a year and suddenly succumb.

Cuttings of coniferous trees are made from new growths about two to three inches long. These are set into a sand-soil mixture in shallow boxes and placed in a coldframe. Roots may form the following spring, when the cuttings that have turned brown are discarded.

The others remain in the boxes in the coldframe for at least a year, sometimes two years, before they are strong enough to be planted out in a sheltered spot for growing.

Unfortunately, branches rarely suffer damage at the right time of year for taking cuttings.

Most wind damage occurs in the late November gales, and snow damage during winter, while construction work on the property, on adjoining property, or on the street beyond the fence, cannot be timed to suit the taking of cuttings from plants that may be damaged.

Much as we regret having a plant damaged, it is best to discard the damaged portion together with any ideas about obtaining a new plant.

More important than propagating the damaged portion is the preservation of what is left of the original.

The broken surface should be made into a clean cut with a sharp pruning saw, the edges carefully trimmed with a sharp pruning knife, and the cut surface covered with Braco tree emulsion or a similar product known to be harmless to plant growth.

This should be done immediately the break occurs before disease germs or fungous spores enter the open wound. The broken piece can then be put into the incinerator and forgotten.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your adveertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Friday; 8:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

136-Unit Apartment Rejected

Saanich council was swayed by vocal neighborhood opinion Monday night in unanimously refusing a developer rezoning permission to build a 136-unit apartment development at the corner of North Dairy and Wetherby, across the street from the Hillside shopping centre.

In a 135-name petition to council, residents complained that if the project went ahead it would "drastically alter a quiet residential neighborhood into an overcrowded ghetto."

Several residents also voiced personal protests at the hearing, with possible traffic problems and lowering of property values among the recurring concerns.

One man, a gardening enthusiast, complained that the two proposed buildings would deprive his greenhouse of sunshine.

Another resident of Wetherby said he lives opposite a pumping station where, under certain wind conditions, "the smell is enough to cross your eyes."

With an additional load on the sewer system, he said, "I am likely to be permanently cross-eyed."

Several representatives of the developers, Capital City Construction, told council that the site is an ideal one for apartments, and was recommended for that use by the Saanich planning department.

In other hearings Monday night, council approved several rezonings, including:

—Property in the Strawberry Vale-Roy Road area, which will lose its present rural classification (five-acre minimum subdivision restriction) and be rezoned to detached housing (6,000-square-foot lots, minimum width 60 feet). The area is now being sewered.

—Property at 4583 Wilkinson Road, to enable construction of a 145-seat church building. The applicants, whose bid was opposed by a number of residents, have agreed to abide by the municipal engineer's requirements for site drainage and other servicing improvements.

Council also agreed to enter a land-use contract with Aske Construction Ltd., regulating the development of a site on the east side of Cedar Hill between Garnet and McKenzie, adjacent to the present McKenzie Mall. The $1.8 million project will provide office and retail space.

Oak Bay School Merger

Oak Bay junior and senior secondary schools will operate under a combined administration next year, the Greater Victoria school board decided Monday night.

The merger is an attempt to cut costs of running the two schools, located next to each other on Cadboro Bay Road.

The move was suggested in a report to the board by superintendent Alan Stables, who said the move would also be beneficial from an educational point of view.

Joining the two schools would provide better long-range planning and a smooth continuation of programs for students, he said in the report.

If the two facilities are administered under one roof, more effective use of buildings and staff could also be made, Stables suggested in his report.

The report doesn't call for any closure. Earlier this year trustees decided no secondary schools would be shut down in the fall.

Stables pointed out in his report that enrolment predictions show Oak Bay junior dropping from 620 to 400 students by 1981 while the senior school population will fall from 775 to 670 by the same year.

Those predictions are conservative, Stables said.

In his report, Stables estimated that the amalgamation of the two schools will cost $27,000. However, that cost would be overcome by combining administration and staff.

Lampson Stays Closed

Ald. Ken Hill told council the building would be too costly to renovate and maintain.

An engineer's study estimated the cost of upgrading the building to regulation standards at $300,000 while yearly maintenance would be about $100,000, Hill said.

The committee considered the possible use of the school following a petition by Esquimalt residents.

The school board was willing to let the municipality have the 75-year-old school, vacant since the spring of 1976, for a 10-year period.

Ald. Larry Mann said he is not satisfied with the committee's findings.

In other business, council approved handing over to the Capital Region District the matter of awarding grants to various organizations. This is presently under the jurisdiction of the inter-municipal committee.

Ald. Colin Blair and Ald. Mann were opposed.

SCHOOL AID SLIPS

Direct provincial aid to municipalities for education is eroding at a significant rate, Ald. Peter Bunn told Oak Bay council Monday.

He reported on a survey he conducted for council prior to approving the 1978 budget, in which he warned aldermen to watch School District 61 closely as elections approach with the possibility of more liberal-spending trustees joining the board.

Bunn said that in 1968 the direct share of local education costs paid by the province was 46 per cent and this year will be only 34.95 per cent, not counting the home owner grant, which would narrow the difference slightly.

He said the majority of the school board has done its best to hold down costs, but the province was engaged in a "contrived and planned measure to put the pressure on local school boards to make them super whipping boys."

The electorate, he said, must be careful in future about who is elected, or face a "devastating effect on local taxes," which would in turn reflect on local councils.

Mayor Brian Smith said he totally agreed with Bunn, predicting a horrendous effect on taxes if the liberal spenders are elected. It would be harder for property owners on fixed incomes to stay in their homes, he said.

Bunn, a former school board chairman, said the educational dollar is not well spent and there should be no additional spending of any kind. He suggested council maintain a closer liaison with the school board, and Smith said there may have to be more joint meetings with council later in the year.

SHUFFLE FACES SCHOOL PRINCIPALS

A number of shifts and transfers are in the works for principals and vice-principals in the Greater Victoria school district.

The names of those involved should be known in about two weeks, school board chairman Susan Brice said today.

She said this is the time of the year when senior staffing changes for the following school year are made.

Those involved are notified and if they are not satisfied with the proposed move they have an opportunity to appeal. When everything is settled, the names and moves are made public.

Mrs. Brice would not say just how many principals and vice-principals are involved in this year's shuffle.

Board Wants School Saved

The board also will ask the city of Victoria to help restore the 84-year-old school for educational purposes and to explore provincial and federal sources of funding for the project.

Restoration will cost approximately $900,000, according to trustee Pete Dorazio, who made the motion to the board.

South Park was one of six schools considered for closure due to declining enrolment, but trustees decided to keep it open after a series of public hearings.

Parents and staff said during the hearings they were concerned about the future of the school and recommended trustees look for funding to restore the building.

Last year, the school board asked the provincial government for financial help with no success, but no approach has been made to the municipality, Dorazio pointed out in his submission.

U.S. Beefs Over Pipe

BAYTOWN, Tex. (AP) — U.S. Representative Bob Eckhardt (Dem. Tex.) says the United States is getting the short end of the stick concerning competitive bidding with Canada for projects involving construction of the Alaska natural-gas pipeline.

Representative Bob Gammage (Dem. Tex.) adds that the United States "is giving Canada the stick to hit us with."

Both congressmen are members of the subcommittee on energy and power of the House of Representatives committee on interstate and foreign commerce which met Monday.

The congressmen were particularly critical of Canada's insistence that 54-inch or 56-inch pipe be used for an 1,800-kilometre section of the 7,900-kilometre pipeline to be constructed from Alaska through Canada to the lower 48 states.

Eckhardt said the move effectively prevents any U.S. manufacturer from bidding for the project since no U.S. firm produces pipe larger than 48 inches. The U.S. Steel Corp.'s works plant here is the only American facility capable of manufacturing 48-inch pipe.

Eckhardt said he would like the committee to investigate why 48-inch pipe, found to require the lowest cost of service, was rejected by Canada in favor of a pipe manufactured only in Canada.

Construction is scheduled to begin in 1981 at an estimated cost of $10 billion.

Things Go Worse With Coke

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Federal Trade Commission ruled Monday that Coca-Cola Co. and PepsiCo, Inc. illegally restricted potential competition by imposing territorial restrictions on their bottlers.

In a 2-1 decision, the commission overruled an earlier order by an FTC judge and ordered the two giant soft drink companies to remove the territorial limitations.

The commission majority said removing the territorial restrictions would enhance competition and reduce prices to consumers.

Officials of both companies said they would appeal the FTC order through the federal courts.

In Atlanta, J. Paul Austin, chairman of the board of Coca-Cola, said, "Our bottler contracts for over 77 years have been on the basis of an economically efficient and socially desirable business system." He said that while the FTC ruling is being appealed, Coca-Cola will continue to enforce existing contracts with bottlers.

Arms Talks Hinge On Prisoner Swap

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has cautioned the Soviet Union that its treatment of Soviet dissident Anatoly Shcharansky might have a direct bearing on U.S.-Soviet relations and influence prospects for a new arms agreement, administration officials say.

The disclosure came in advance of a scheduled visit here Wednesday of an East German lawyer who is reported to be ready to discuss deals to free Shcharansky and a U.S. CIA employee who is in jail in Cuba.

Administration officials, who asked not to be named, said Moscow was told that unjust treatment of Shcharansky might stimulate anti-Soviet sentiment in the United States and lessen chances for congressional approval of a strategic arms limitation agreement now being negotiated.

Shcharansky, 29, is awaiting trial on charges of working with other dissidents to collect military and industrial secrets for the CIA. President Carter denies that Shcharanksy had links with the CIA.

The East German lawyer planning to come to the United States this week is Wolfgang Vogel, who was involved in a previous Soviet-U.S. prisoner swap in 1962.

He also is helping to arrange, with Representative Benjamin Gilman (Rep. N.Y.) a prisoner swap among East Germany, the United States and Mozambique. Vogel plans to present his proposals to Gilman at a meeting to be witnessed by a state department official, sources said. But they said they are not optimistic that a deal for Shcharanksy can be struck.

One official explained that any deal involving Shcharansky's freedom in return for that of a convicted Soviet spy "would be tantamount to an admission by the United States that Shcharansky is guilty of the charges against him."

He said that the United States has no counter-proposals to present to Vogel.

Sources said Vogel also may be prepared to offer the release of CIA contract employee Lawrence Lunt, imprisoned in Cuba for the last 13 years on spy charges.

It is generally accepted that Vogel, in return, would ask the United States to free Lolita Lebron, a Puerto Rican nationalist convicted in a 1954 shooting attack on the House of Representatives. A 1976 Lunt-for-Lebron exchange proposal fell through for reasons which are still not clear.

Lunt's lawyer, John Wainwright, said Monday he isn't convinced that Vogel is authorized to negotiate on behalf of the Cuban government.

Gilman returned Monday from Mozambique, where he served as a go-between in the release of an Israeli citizen, Miron Marcus, who had been held for the last 19 months.

Tearful Hanna Jailed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite a tearful apology and his lawyer's fervent plea for mercy, former California representative Richard Hanna was ordered on Monday to spend six months to 2½ years in prison for his role in the Korean influence-buying scandal.

Hanna, a white-haired, 64-year-old Democrat, is the only past or present member of Congress to be convicted in the case. One other, former representative Otto Passman of Louisiana, has been charged.

A former six-term congressman who moved to Fayetteville, Ark., upon his retirement in 1974, Hanna appeared contrite and shaken as he haltingly told Chief District Judge William Bryant that "I hope in the years that I have left I can do something to atone for what I have done."

Gypsies Threaten Siege of London

LONDON (Reuter) — Gypsies, saying they are treated as second-class citizens, are threatening to block roads into London if Prime Minister James Callaghan does not respond satisfactorily to their protests.

Romany council chairman Bill Varey delivered a letter of protest Monday to the prime minister's official residence, 10 Downing Street, after parking his wagon across three parking meter spaces nearby.

At the heart of the Gypsies' grievances is a regulation compelling each family to choose one wagon site to register at, which prevents them from moving around.

Varey told reporters that if the Gypsies do not get satisfaction by Friday, they will block roads into London — including tunnels under the River Thames and a bridge over it — with 200 wagons.

Torture Reported

SALISBURY (Reuter) — One of the black nationalist parties in Rhodesia's new multi-racial interim government said it has reports of torture and rape by security forces in protected villages.

The United African National Council (UANC) headed by Bishop Abel Muzorewa said in a statement the reports have been submitted from Marange, Honde and other operational areas.

Protected villages, where many rural blacks have been transferred to deny food and shelter to guerrillas, come under the defence department, but officials there are not immediately available for comment.

Patty's Lawyer Still Trying

SAN FRANCISCO — Patricia Hearst's lawyer is hoping the U.S. Supreme Court will not be the court of last resort in his efforts to keep the newspaper heiress out of prison. The high court refused on Monday to review Hearst's 1976 bank-robbery conviction, and defense lawyer Albert Johnson was to meet here today with U.S. Attorney William Hunter to discuss where the case can go next. Hunter said he expected Johnson to discuss the chances of a reduction of Heart's seven-year conviction. Miss Hearst served 14 months behind bars before, during and after her conviction. Out on $1-million bail, she is under threat of another 14 months confinement before she becomes eligible for parole.

TUCSON, Ariz. — Dennis Wilson, drummer for The Beach Boys music group, was arrested Monday after a 16-year-old girl was alleged to have been found with him in his hotel room, police said. Wilson, 32, was booked and held at Pima County Jail for investigation of contributing to the delinquency of a minor. The girl, whose identity was not released, was taken to the county juvenile court centre for investigation of violating curfew. Police Sgt. Bob Sulzbach said Wilson's arrest at the hotel "apparently involved a party with some underage people there."

LONDON — Princess Anne and her husband, Capt. Mark Phillips, were not among the British team members listed for the World Three-Day Event equestrian championships at Lexington, Ky., in September. The princess, who won the European title in 1971 and competed at the Montreal Olympics in 1976, gave a disappointing performance on her horse, Goodwill, at the recent Badminton Horse Trials, finishing 16th in a field of 27.

WAYNE, N.J. — Former senator Sam Ervin says he agreed to make a commercial for American Express cards because the government needs the money. "You know, the government takes 53½ per cent of every dollar I make," Ervin told a news conference Monday before a speech at William Paterson College. "I knew the government needed the money. So I figured I'd make some more (from the commercial) so I could pay my income tax."

MOSCOW — Soviet writer Alexander Chakovsky has been awarded this year's Lenin Prize for his novel about the Second World War and the siege of Leningrad entitled Blockade, the Soviet news agency Tass reported Monday. The prize is the country's highest literary award.

EXCLUSIVE STORY

LONDON — Joyce McKinney and Keith May, U.S. defendants in a British kidnap case who skipped bail and fled to the United States, have a deal with Penthouse magazine, a London law firm said Monday.

A statement from lawyer David Offenbach, speaking for Penthouse, did not say what the agreement involved. But reports in the British news media said it is for the couple's exclusive story.

Testimony in preliminary court proceedings was that Anderson, 21, of Provo, Utah, was chained to a bed and forced to have sex with McKinney, a former Miss Wyoming-USA.

Offenbach's statement said: "In view of press inquiries to the Penthouse Organization, I am instructed to say that there is an agreement between Miss McKinney and Mr. May, and Mr. Robert Guccione, managing director of Penthouse Organization, in relation to their business affairs."

Offenbach said he was advised that Miss McKinney telephoned Guccione in New York following the disappearance from Britain on April 12 of the blonde and her co-defendant.

"I understand she did not tell him where they were, and Mr. Guccione does not know their whereabouts, or their future intentions," Offenbach's statement said. It added that Guccione "will be in England at the end of the week and will give further information to the press."

Son of Sam Trial Set

NEW YORK — A New York state judge has ruled that David Berkowitz is mentally fit to stand trial for the last of the Son of Sam murders. But defence lawyers must first persuade the man accused of being the .44-calibre killer to take their advice and plead not guilty by reason of insanity.

The defendant has frequently expressed a desire to plead guilty and the ruling Monday by Justice Joseph Corso of the state Supreme Court contained references to Berkowitz's "full consideration, pro and con, as to the legal alternatives available to him."

In his six-page ruling released from the bench, Corso said Berkowitz fulfilled the two requirements for competency: comprehension of the charges and ability to assist in the defence.

On tapes played at his first competency hearing last year, Berkowitz told psychiatrists he wanted to plead guilty.

American Allowed To Return Home

MOSCOW — An 89-year-old Pennsylvanian man who was refused permission to leave the Soviet Union after visiting his birthplace eight months ago has been issued with an exit visa, the U.S. Embassy said Monday.

An embassy official said Charles Puka of McKeesport, Pa., had been sent to Moscow from the Ukrainian village he had been visiting and is expected to fly back to the United States shortly.

"We had been raising his case with the Soviets for the past several months and they finally let him go," the official said.

Crippled Workers Praised

OTTAWA (CP) — MPs from all parties tried to outdo each other in in the Commons Monday in praising handicapped workers.

However, they ran out of time before a decision could be taken on whether a special subcommittee should be set up to study the needs of physically and mentally handicapped people in Canada.

Conservative Walter Dinsdale (Brandon Souris) proposed establishment of the Commons subcommittee to provide accurate information on handicapped people and help avoid duplication of government services for them.

This would make it possible for the handicapped to live a creative, fruitful and independent life in the family and community. Canada would become a world leader in rehabilitation programs.

Cyril Symes (NDP—Sault Ste. Marie) said the government should lead the way in employment and social services for the handicapped.

Licences Urged for Parenthood

MONTREAL (CP) — The federal government should establish a tribunal to test and license prospective parents with a history of violence and to enforce sterilization of unfit mothers, says the president of a private organization investigating domestic strife.

"I would be in favor of sterilization as part of the prevention of criminal behavior in the family," Mary Van Stolk, president and founder of The Tree Foundation of Canada, said in an interview Monday.

Ms. Van Stolk said the federal government should request that the United Nations establish a committee to examine the legal, medical and social rights of children and to oversee the creation of tribunals around the world which would test and license individuals whose past behavior makes them unfit for parenthood.

Asked if she feared that such tribunals might eventually require all prospective parents to seek licences, Ms. Van Stolk replied: "I don't fear it at all . . .

"We have to move the focus from the rights of adults to the rights of children," she said. "At present, parents are the fifth largest killer of children in North America.

"Any form of torture that you have ever read about or know about, anything that happens to a political prisoner in terms of sexual and physical abuse, any kinds of terrors and atrocities — there you have in a nutshell what has happened to children in North American families.

"Child abuse has reached disastrous proportions," she added. "Too many people who know nothing about children are raising them.

"You need a licence to drive a car, so why do we assume that it's everybody's right to have a child?"

RCMP Porn Probe Hint

MONTREAL (CP) — The RCMP Security Service got details of a burglar-alarm system in a building that contained Parti Quebecois membership lists by telling the company that installed the alarm that the Mounties were investigating a pornography ring.

The information was contained in a top-secret 1972 memo, written about six weeks before the Security Service actually took computer tapes containing the membership lists. The memo was tabled Monday as an exhibit before the McDonald royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing.

The memo said the Mounties went to the company that installed the alarm system and told a representative "that we were conducting an inquiry on a pornography ring and suspected this publishing company to be involved." The Mounties were given information that enabled them to unlock the alarm system on the front door, which they entered when they took the tapes Jan. 9, 1973. The alarm would have alerted Montreal police if it had gone off.

"Are there any limits to the pretexts you'll authorize or approve?" commission counsel Bruno Pateras asked RCMP Supt. J.P. Nowlan, who was involved in planning an operation Pateras said was "very typical . . . of illegal break-ins" by the RCMP.

"To what limit will you go—if there is a limit—in giving information that is false?"

Nowlan replied that it depended on the situation. There may have been practices that were unethical or improper but they "weren't reflected upon" in 1972.

In operation Ham, the RCMP removed, copied and returned the membership lists. The Parti Quebecois, now the governing party in Quebec, was the official opposition party in 1973.

Nowlan, in another top-secret memo dated Nov. 14, 1972, asked RCMP headquarters to approve Operation Ham, "through which we hope to gain the membership list of the Parti Quebecois."

"Our 'G' Operations confines its interest in the PQ to its use as a vehicle by revolutionaries or agents of a foreign power," the memo said. "Since the Vallieres declaration of one year ago the revolutionary movement has turned in the direction of the PQ. . ."

BIAS-BELTED TIRE RECALL

KITCHENER (CP) — B. F. Goodrich Canada Ltd. announced plans Monday to recall about 3,500 bias-belted passenger car tires that may not meet endurance requirements set by the federal transport department.

The company said if the tires are under-inflated or used with excessive loads, air loss or sidewall separation could result.

Inadvertent use of a contaminant on production equipment caused the problem, which the company said has been corrected.

The recall will involve both black and whitewall tires distributed in Canada since Nov. 14, 1977.

94th YEAR, No. 242 ★ ★ ★ VICTORIA, BRITISH COLUMBIA, TUESDAY, APRIL 25, 1978 ★ ★ ★ 15 CENTS DAILY, 30 CENTS SATURDAY

Mountie Shot; 3 Held

SASKATOON (CP) — Constable Thomas Brian King, 40, a seven-year veteran of the RCMP, was slain early today and his body thrown into the South Saskatchewan River after he had stopped a vehicle on a routine highway check.

Police told a news conference that a third suspect had been apprehended in connection with the incident. They said earlier that two Saskatoon men had been taken into custody for questioning.

Police said the officer's weapon is missing.

An RCMP spokesman said one male suspect was arrested in the city and a second, who had fled on foot, was arrested by the RCMP at a roadblock about 5 a.m.

They released no details about the third suspect.

All three are expected to appear in court later today.

S.Sgt. Ron Lawford said earlier that police were first alerted when an abandoned RCMP cruiser was found in the early morning on Highway 11.

He said a constable apparently was shot after stopping a vehicle for a routine check on Highway 11 at 51st Street about 12:45 a.m.

King, who had been patrolling north of the city, had been alone in a marked police cruiser.

Police said he apparently had been driven from the highway area to the Queen Elizabeth power station, about six kilometres away, where he was shot and his body dumped in the river. The body was recovered a few hours after the police investigation began.

PROJECTS WORTH $5B POSTPONED

OTTAWA (CP) — Construction projects worth $5 billion had been postponed at the end of 1977 and another $1.1 billion of orders were cancelled outright, the president of the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada said Monday.

Donald Baldwin issued a statement blaming the situation primarily on the current economic climate as well as the postponement of government projects.

The institute's findings were based on a survey of 656 architectural firms across the country, representing about 60 per cent of the country's architects.

A total value of $9.98 billion of construction projects now are under way.

Building Trades Seek 15 Per Cent

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. construction workers will be demanding a 15 per cent pay hike and a 32-hour week, according to a spokesman for one of the unions bargaining as part of a construction industry joint council. The British Columbia and Yukon Building Trades Council will begin negotiating this week with the Construction Labor Relations Association on behalf of 35,000 members of 17 construction unions in the province.

This year is the first time negotiations have been conducted on an industry-wide basis. The plumbers union is the only union not included, but a plumbers' spokesman said Monday the demands being presented by the joint body are similar to those of his union.

An official of Local 919 of the cement masons union said his union wants the 15-per-cent wage increase, a two-per-cent increase in holiday pay and the 32-hour week. He said he could safely say all the other trades will want the same deal.

The construction industry negotiations will be the first major set of labor talks in B.C. since the expiration of federal wage and price controls.

"There has been rampant speculation, purely speculation," he said, adding that the real demands have yet to be presented.

CLRA president Chuck McVeigh said talks so far have involved only individual unions, and no joint demands have been made.

The construction unions are bargaining jointly as a result of a Labor Relations Board order last month. The LRB said a joint council was the best method to prevent a dispute with an individual union from crippling the entire industry.

Construction industry contracts expire April 30. The federal anti-inflation board twice rolled back wage increases gained in previous negotiations.

ICBC RECORDS A DEFICIT

The Insurance Corporation of B.C.recorded an $8.6 million deficit from operations last year, but is in a sound financial condition, Education Minister Pat McGeer said Monday.

The report said that in the last year alone, the average cost per bodily injury claim has increased by 47 per cent to $6,547 in 1977 from $4,454 in 1976.

He said that despite the operational deficit, B.C. drivers can look forward to continuation of safe driver discounts next year. Full details of the report appear on Page 7.

NEWS BRIEFS

Campbell Wins

BCR Decision

FORT NELSON (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett said Monday the government will make a decision on the future of B.C. Railway's Fort Nelson extension within the next six weeks. See story on page 15.

Mercury Danger

Dollar Rises

Commercial demand for Canadian dollars pushed the currency nearly a third-of-a-cent higher in quiet trading on New York money markets Monday and it remained marginally higher at noon today at 88.18 cents U.S.

Stocks Boom

Skylab Lives

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Skylab, the 85-ton space station abandoned four years ago, came back to life Monday. The spacecraft began charging four of its solar-powered batteries in response to a command from flight controllers to slow its fall from orbit.

Dayan Off to U.S., But No New Ideas

TEL AVIV (Reuter) — Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan left for Washington today, saying he was not taking any new ideas or proposals for a Middle East settlement with him.

Speaking to reporters before his departure, Dayan expressed strong opposition to the proposed sale of U.S. fighter planes to Saudi Arabia and Egypt as part of a package deal that includes sales of planes to Israel.

"I feel it is our right to express our opinion that the sale of these warplanes to Saudi Arabia and Egypt will endanger Israel and think the United States has adopted a wrong attitude in this matter," the foreign minister said.

He said Israel believes the United States must adhere to earlier promises to supply Israel with planes without linking their sale to Saudi Arabia and Egypt.

"If they will punish us because of our objections, then we must accept that, but the American attitude is absolutely wrong," Dayan said.

Meanwhile, U.S. special envoy Alfred Atherton is returning home with a message from President Anwar Sadat of Egypt to President Carter but without any new Egyptian proposals for resuming Middle East peace talks.

In Washington, President Carter today requested nearly $2 billion in economic-related security assistance for key countries in the Middle East, Africa and the eastern Mediterranean — most of it for Egypt and Israel.

The bulk of the request, over $1.5 billion, is to help the economies of Israel ($785 million) and Egypt ($750 million) because "the pursuit of peace and of economic progress are intertwined," Harold Saunders, assistant secretary of State for Near Eastern Affairs, told a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee.

NOT DOWN-UP is the heading of a skier using an Uphill Racer, a parachute with steering bar attached developed by a Swiss engineer. The handy device which takes the place of lifts, tows and two-legged climbing, sells for about $800, and could be something for new year.

Ottawa 'Bureaucracy' Delaying Ogden Point

Westcan Terminals president Hershell Smith said today Ottawa has not forwarded a single dollar for the Ogden Point reconstruction program and there is no way the project can be completed on schedule.

He said bureaucratic delays have resulted in two things:

—The pulp shed which would employ between 80 and 100 people is still unfinished and workers cannot be hired — a serious problem in view of Victoria's unemployment rate.

—The facilities to receive cruise ship passengers will not be finished by June as scheduled, meaning there will be no dock facilities for passengers this summer.

Smith called a news conference at Westcan Terminals this morning to protest the costly delays in getting Ottawa to live up to its pledge, announced Dec. 23, to raise and improve the dock and to install services such as water and lights.

"We have lived up to our part of the bargain," he said. "But nothing has been forthcoming from Ottawa."

A ministry of transport proposal to spend $1.25 million on the dock has gone to cabinet but has not yet been approved, he said.

He said he has asked the Victoria Chamber of Commerce, Mayor Mike Young and the provincial government to ask Ottawa to move on its commitments.

Smith said he is confident the money will be forthcoming but each week of delay is costly to the city.

Westcan has already built the walls of a pulp shed at the Ogden Point dock at a cost of $350,000. But the floor can not be constructed until Ottawa raises and improves the dock.

Tenders were to have been called May 9 but this has now been delayed until May 23, he said.

FEW JOBS BEGGING

OTTAWA (UPI) — Canada's more than one million unemployed had a daily average of only 37,800 unfilled jobs to chose from during the first three months of this year, Statistics Canada reported today. The preliminary estimate showed the number of job vacancies was 6 per cent higher than during the last three months of 1977 but was 5 per cent, or 1,900 jobs, lower than during the same period a year earlier.

AIRPORTS 'HAZARDOUS'

OTTAWA (CP) — A Conservative MP Monday night released a government memorandum saying pilots are taking off and landing at airports in violation of safety rules because they know the transport ministry can or will do little about it.

"Alleged breaches of air regulations are becoming so common that with the limited staff and equipment available all but recurrent and obviously hazardous situations must be overlooked," says the report released by Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg South Centre).

Air Route Mulled

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — The Civil Aeronautics Board has agreed to consider a plan by Northwest Airlines to begin an air route between Spokane and Vancouver, the Spokane Area Chamber of Commerce said Monday.

Sun Life Move Okayed

The vote, including policyholder proxies, was more than 83 per cent in favor of the move.

The vote percentage was given in an interim report by the scrutiners at the meeting, attended by about 800 participating policyholders. The complete breakdown was to be released later at the meeting.

A last-ditch attempt by the federal government and a group headed by Montreal lawyer Richard Holden failed to prevent the move, first announced in January by Sun Life president Thomas Galt.

The federal government, a policyholder, announced Monday it was voting against the proposed move and urged other policyholders to do likewise.

Holden had tried unsuccessfully to obtain an Ontario Supreme Court injunction to have today's meeting delayed for six months.

Holden said after the meeting that the action before the Ontario courts seeking to invalidate the move "will be in limbo for a while and could be activated at any time if the company acts against its formal declaration that the move is only a paper move."

NO RCMP SLAPS

TORONTO (CP) — Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais says in an interview with the Globe and Mail that he is planning no disciplinary action against senior RCMP officials who have authorized break-ins without warrants, illegal mail openings, issuance of phoney comuniques and other activities. See also Page 40.

Blais also says the federal government knew last September of about 400 RCMP break-ins without warrants, made public last week in testimony before a federal commissioin led by Mr. Justice David C. McDonald.

Blais says in the interview he does not think the reputations of RCMP officials have been tarnished and that internal shake-ups are not necessary.

He says the government instructed the force to stop the break-ins without warrants and that he is satisfied with that until the commission reports in 1980 or 1981.

Disciplinary measures and other changes in the force will be considered then, the solicitor-general says.

The break-ins without warrants were not individual acts but procedures approved by the force itself, Blais says.

Goyer's Tab Likely Stuck On Taxpayers

OTTAWA (FP) — Unless an appeal is launched, Canadian taxpayers will cover the $10,000 damages awarded a senior public servant in his libel action against Supply and Services Minister Jean-Pierre Goyer, Justice Minister Ron Basford told the Commons Monday.

"In line with a number of precedents," Basford said, "the Crown acted for the defendant (Goyer) in that case on the basis of past experience and past practice."

GORY FREE-FOR-ALL ERUPTS OVER MORO

ROME (UPI) — Police firing tear gas Tuesday broke up a bloody free-for-all in downtown Rome between 4,000 youths denouncing Red Brigades terrorists and a gang of extremists gleefully taunting them by chanting "Aldo Moro is no more."

As the entire nation awaited word on the fate of the soft-spoken Moro, President Giovanni Leone marked celebration of the 33rd anniversary of Italy's uprising against the Nazis and Fascists by condemning the "perfidious menace" of terrorism and calling for "faith in humanity's ability to overcome barbarity."

Extremist infiltrators at the tail end of the youth march shouting pro-terrorist slogans.

Meanwhile, a flurry of anonymous telephone calls announcing that Moro had been killed by his Red Brigades kidnappers was received today by the Italian news agency ANSA.

'Nosy Parker' Loses Suit

VANCOUVER (CP) — A census-taker described by the judge as a "nosy Parker" was denied damages Monday in B. C. Supreme Court for a broken wrist suffered in a fall while calling at a Duncan home.

The federal government sued the homeowner, Mrs. Diane Joan McKay, after census-taker Mrs. Marjorie Haley, 63, tripped on a piece of plywood and injured her wrist in June, 1976.

Justice Kirke Smith said the census-taker first went to the back door to pick up a completed form, then to the front door, but got no answer because the family was not at home.

"Mrs. Haley, however, was not content to accept the fact the house was empty," Justice Smith said. "She was being paid per house call, with no mileage allowance, and understandably was determined to make this her only call to the house."

Mrs. Haley decided to see if there was an occupant in the back garden, went along a path, tripped on a piece of plywood which she described as greasy, and suffered the wrist injury.

Justice Smith said Mrs. McKay had taken reasonable steps to ensure her one-acre property was safe, and the census-taker had exceeded her area of so-called invitation.

"The danger, if danger there was, was obvious," Justice Smith said. "Mrs. Haley had no business canvassing the whole property to avoid a call-back, and as a 'nosy Parker' her unfortunate injuries and its consequences are not matters for which she can here claim relief."

SCHOOL BOARD REJECTS SUMMER STUDENT WORK

The Greater Victoria school district won't hire any students this summer because it has decided not to compiy with a union demand to provide the workers with scale wages.

The demand was made by two locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

The two CUPE locals refused to accept the school board's applications to hire 43 students under the Provincial Youth Employment Program (PYEP) this summer unless they were paid union wages of $5.95 an hour plus six per cent holiday pay.

The board planned to create 13 projects that would pay nine university students $3.20 an hour and 30 high school students $3 an hour. Their wages would be supplied by PYEP.

But CUPE locals 382 and 947, covering inside and outside non-teaching staff, turned down all but one of the projects unless the students were paid union wages.

The board decided not to apply for PYEP funds this year.

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

But one thing about Rohmer — he produces. Moreover, his books sell.

Since the 54-year-old native of Ontario began writing seriously in 1970, he's averaged one book a year, churning out four novels and three non-fiction works. His books have sold more than half a million copies to date.

He's a corporation lawyer, who has represented the interests of major land developers in Ontario and the North West Territories for more than 20 years.

He's a military man, too; since Feb. 1, a major-general in charge of all militia, naval reserve and air reserve units across Canada.

That job alone takes up three days of his standard seven-day work week.

He's a flyer as well, having been a jet fighter pilot and wing commander. During the Second World War he completed 135 missions in Mustangs and flew low-level reconnaisance over the beachheads at D-Day.

"I had the best view of anyone," he says.

He still flies and has an Air Force ticket to operate a single-engine Otter. He owns a five seater Short-Take-Off-and-Landing (STOL) Helio Courier in which he commutes between his office in Toronto and 50-acre farm at Collingwood near Georgian Bay where he does most of his writing.

These days Rohmer is a man on the go. Twice in the past week he has popped into Victoria, once on military business, the other on a one-day visit as part of a cross-Canada tour to plug his latest book, a biography of E.P. Taylor, Canada's multimillionaire entrepreneur and horse-racing enthusiast.

Rohmer clearly enjoys the pace.

"What role do I prefer?"

"Them all. I'm a lawyer, military person and author."

Rohmer is, indeed, an unflappable mix of all three. He has the demeanor of the lawyer, the discipline of the soldier and the same urgency to share his thoughts with others that characterizes all authors.

The E.P.Taylor biography is something of an anomoly, but then again Taylor himself asked Rohmer to write it. And who refuses E. P. Taylor?

"I write in the form I do to put forth propositions I feel are worth talking about," he says, adding his books are a mechanism to influence thinking, to present people with facts he believes they're not getting and to discuss events . . . and possibilities.

He fears if Canadian politicians delay much longer in renegotiating the terms of confederation, the country will break apart.

North American society, too, is in jeopardy if solutions aren't soon forthcoming to the pressing energy problems.

So far he's been right on target. His novel, Separation, came out six months before the Parti Quebecois swept into power in Quebec and, in his words, "the unspeakable happened."

Two other novels, Exxoneration and his best-selling Ultimatum, written in 1974 and 1973 respectively, anticipated critical natural gas shortages that are now plaguing the United States.

He's 200 pages into his next novel about how a newly elected U.S. president, named John Heath Hansen, deals with catastrophic gas shortages in 1985. He isn't sure what the title will be. Maybe Great Balls of Gas, he says.

Up to now he's written almost exclusively about Canadians for Canadians.

He makes no pretence about his writings.

"I don't intend to write the normal literary style," he says.

"What I write about are events. The characters are there only to carry the events forward, to make the point I want to make.

"I don't have enough time or space to develop the characters as the academics say they should be developed."

"The real critics are the people who buy the books.

"If my books weren't worth a damn, then no one would buy them."

ROHMER . . . militia, law, literature

Trustees to Study Student Unrest

They made the decision after being told a major educational overhaul is neccessary to reduce student unrest in the system.

Superintendent Alan Stables told the board in a brief submitted Monday night serious system inadequacies are causing problems for students between the ages of 13 and 16.

The brief, which was not requested by the board, was prepared independently by the administration out of concern for the services being provided to students at the junior level.

Stables recommended a total upgrading of areas the administration regards as inadequate.

In the brief, he recommends providing more program variety, better counselling services, diagnostic and remedial services and service training for staff teaching communication skills.

Pupils are dropping out of the system because of inadequate instruction, educational deficiency, boredom and personal problems, Stables said.

Other students who stay in the system are not learning and become adjusted to failure or experience little challenge and pass on "as they would through any ordeal," according to the brief.

The findings are the result of a review of Grade 7 and junior secondary programs, a review of attendance records, studies of students who leave the system and discussions with parents, pupils, principals and teachers.

"This is not a program for entertainment or baby sitting. It is a program concerned with mastery of skills probably the lack of which is at the core of a high percentage of boredom, frustration and delinquency," Stables said.

He recommended the board first form a committee to set educational goals at the junior level and come up with a working model.

Budget Set At $10.9m In Oak Bay

Oak Bay council Monday adopted a $10.9 million budget and set a municipal tax rate of 63.97 mills.

The 1978 budget is up $1.1 million from a year ago even though the local tax rate is down one mill, largely because of debt reduction.

Meanwhile property assessments set by the province have jumped, with the result that taxpayers will mostly pay more.

Mayor Brian Smith said the budget comes as a result of several months' work by council and the recreation commission to hold the tax rate at its 1977 level.

Council lowered the debt and general rate one mill but it must also meet non-municipal obligations such as the regional district, regional hospital and school district tax rates, which are up over four mills.

A few owners of new houses or apartment owners who have been subject to assessment controls may find they will pay lower taxes, Smith said.

Smith said a typical south Oak Bay home assessed at $56,700 will face a tax increase of $91 if the owner is under 65 and $41 if over 65.

He said actual spending this year will rise eight per cent from last year for municipal services. But Oak Bay's outside obligations — as mentioned above — have jumped 18.34 per cent.

The municipality's regional district share is up 55 per cent, including a 25 per cent hike for wages.

Assessment changes have helped raise the value of one mill in Oak Bay from $59,900 to $65,900, which will change as assessments are phased in over the next two years.

Smith said the tennis bubble ran at an operating profit of $62,000 or broke even when debt retirement was subtracted.

He said the recreation centre returns 78 per cent of its cost compared with an average of well below 50 per cent in most public recreation facilities.

He expressed concern about the growing cost of regional government, especially in salaries.

If the province paid its full share of grants in lieu of taxes, Oak Bay could boast a lower mill rate than Victoria, said Ald. Doug Watts.

He said the full effect of such grants will not be felt until the province recognizes the University of Victoria property, which would mean an extra $350,000 to Oak Bay.

The sum would absorb all the increases imposed by outside agencies this year, and cause the mill rate to drop five or six mills, Watts said.

Police PR Cuts 'Disaster'

Victoria Ald. Robin Blencoe criticised the city's police board Monday for proposing to cut $1,500 from the $5,400 allocated for the Victoria police department's community relations section in 1978.

Blencoe said the reduction in funds will destroy the effectiveness of the community relations program.

In a letter to the board, dated April 19, Blencoe said that in other cities, police forces are moving with sincerity and enthusiasm into the community, and the work is being funded at a respectable level.

He said it is disastrous to cut $1,500 from the $5,400 allocated.

"Any suggestion that we are at the moment actually moving ahead in this area is difficult to comprehend."

Blencoe, who has established himself as city council's leading advocate for greater community contact by the police department, urged the board to reconsider its position.

Blencoe is currently working on a report on team policing, a system that stresses personal contact between police officers and people in their beat areas.

The board is to discuss the team concept at a future meeting.

Council Hikes Pay

Oak Bay aldermen Monday voted themselves a four per cent pay raise that works out to $10.53 a month.

Mayor Brian Smith said the bylaw to raise aldermen's salaries from $3,240 to $3,370 a year, and his salary from $7,452 to $7,750, is in keeping with a policy of taking minimal increases regularly rather than infrequent but large ones.

The raise is retroactive to Jan. 1.

Salary Idea Wrong?

Royal Oak Community Association president Ben Pires said today he believes Saanich council acted wrongly Monday in asking ratepayer groups to decide whether the mayor and aldermen should have a salary increase.

Pires said the question of how much elected representatives should be paid is one that should be decided by a special provincially-appointed commission.

Council's budget committee Monday turned down motions to raise Mayor Mel Couvelier's $18,000 stipend by six per cent and aldermen's $6,000 by four per cent.

Instead, it was decided to refer the matter to a committee representing Saanich's 11 ratepayer groups, which will be asked to present its recommendations later this year so that any increase could take effect following the November civic elections.

One immediate snag raised by Pires today: there is no such committee of ratepayer groups in existence.

He said he opposes the principle, and is concerned that council seems to be trying to foist such a body on the associations. (Recently, he noted, council decided that its new environment advisory committee should include a representative from the non-existent council of community associations).

"We have no intention of forming a ratepayers' group or bloc," Pires said.

Surviving Bakers Set to Expand

Local bakeries are poised to expand following the announced closure of McDonalds bakery, the Times learned today.

McDonalds announced Tuesday it will close May 26, laying off 62 of its 80 employees.

The remaining 18 will be kept on to handle sales and distribution.

Fernwood Bakery owner Robert Betker said he can triple his production and hire 12 of the 62 workers about to be laid off by McDonalds if he can obtain financing to expand.

Rosebud Bakers owner Al Herzog will hire one employee immediately and is looking for financing to move to a larger building so he can hire more. Rosebud already has 33 employees.

Betker said his bakery at 775 Lampson could be doubled in size and its production tripled.

" I have four employees now but I would need at least a dozen more. It could happen very quickly if I can get a little financing."

Dave Kozak, business representative for the Teamsters Union local which represents the McDonald employees, said today the company kept the union informed about the problems it was facing.

The employees knew some changes were going to have to be made but were surprised at the drastic nature of the company's move, he said.

Kozak said the union has met with company representatives on one occasion and other meetings are scheduled in order to try and find jobs for the employees facing layoffs.

About 45 of the 62 employees affected by the closure belong to the union and the remainder are office staff and supervisors, he said.

John McDonald, who sold the business to McGavins in 1972, said the closure is tragic for Victoria but necessary from the point of view of McGavins.

He said the Vancouver firm was losing large sums of money across the province and had to close one of its three bakeries, Kelowna, Langley or Victoria.

The closure means Victoria will receive bread from the Langley bakery. The company also let eight employees go at the Kelowna bakery.

Costs were rising while bread costs were fairly rigid, due to low consumption and keen competition from supermarket bakeries.

Rape Centre Funding Urged

The Status of Women Action Group (SWAG) has urged the intermunicipal grants committee to reconsider its recent decision not to fund Victoria's Rape Relief Centre.

Earlier this month the committee turned down a request from the centre for about $16,000. Aldermen on the committee argued that Need-Crisis Line could provide counselling for rape victims and that the Rape Relief Centre should be totally funded by the provincial government.

In a letter to the committee SWAG president Shirley Nordstrom attacked both points, saying that the centre provides a community service and that Need has been referring rape victims to Rape Relief.

"The services provided by Need are vital but they do not extend far enough to handle rape cases," she writes. "Rape Relief counsellors are especially trained in legal and medical procedures which are unique to rape. Rape Relief provides follow-up counselling for continued support. This is essential on a personal level and also on a legal level."

TOWN TALK

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police could have used some of the trusty steeds that made their musical ride famous when the Colwood detachment went looking for a lost cow last weekend.

They made do with their patrol cars, however, and an RCMP spokesman said Monday that the animal was rounded up without any difficulty.

"No problem," said the RCMP officer. "We always get our, uh . . ."

"Cow," supplied the Times reporter.

Take Premier Bill Bennett, a clotheshorse if ever there was one. He's always dapper, usually in a subdued, dark three-piece suit as befits his background and image.

But surprise, surprise.

When that whopping great delegation of disgruntled northerners came down from Fort Nelson to holler their protests about the threatened closure of the Fort Nelson link of the B.C. railway, guess what da preem wore?

A very ordinary sports jacket and slacks outfit that was, as one observer said, "jes' plain folks."

But those same stylish socialists can hardly be recognized come NDP convention time.

Tom and Margaret Denny are looking forward this summer to a reunion with Eric and Susan Hiscock whom they met when they were overseas some time ago ago to bring back their motor sailor, Daphne Isle, from Britain.

Originally from Britain, the Hiscocks have sailed around the world several times and Hiscock is well-known for the books and articles on the many places they have visited.

The Hiscocks have been living aboard their boat Wanderer IV in New Zealand for about two years.

Two Victoria men whose sphere of activity embraces organized labor and politics have been elected to the board of trustees of an international organization dedicated to fostering public awareness and interest in the history of the labor movement in the Pacific Northwest.

Larry Ryan, secretary-treasurer of the Victoria Labor Council, and Larry Tickner, representing the Socialist Party of Canada, were named B.C. representatives to the board of the Pacific Northwest Labor History Association, at the association's 11th annual conference in Seattle last weekend.

Although it now includes many trade unionists, the organization was originally started by academics and Tickner says its conference has been described as a meeting between the "pointy heads and hard hats."

Both Tickner and Ryan deplore the fact that so little is known or taught about the rich history — social, economic and cultural — of the working people of B.C.

. . . And Now the Knees

By FRANK RUTTER
Times London Bureau

LONDON — There has been some question, on national television, of whether it is the news, or the knees, at nine.

The public and private television networks have both got women reading the night news.

And if the British Broadcasting Corporation and Independent Television News are not competing — which they deny they are — it is a remarkable coincidence.

Angela Rippon reads for the BBC.

Anna Ford for ITN.

Angela Rippon was first, and doing a sober and unremarked job until her torrid dance number in tights on the Morecambe and Wise Christmas comedy special in 1976.

Her career just took off after that.

It was with terrific suspense that British viewers awaited the 1977 Morecambe and Wise Christmas show.

Rippon showed her legs again and ITN hired Anna Ford.

After a crash training program, which included a trip to New York to see how Barbara Walters did it, Ford suddenly appeared, unannounced, one day reading the one p.m. news.

Her debut on the peak viewing night news came just over a week ago. It was also unheralded, which is the way ITN wanted it. This gave the private news operators the chance to downplay the impact of Ford on their ratings, which haven't been calculated yet, and won't be for another week, an ITN publicity official said.

"Believe it or not, we have tried to play this thing down," said the official.

Most people do not believe it.

The newspapers have had a field day. The Sun carried a centrefold spread, with a scoreboard rating "sex appeal"— Anna fifteen, Angela, ten — clothes, face, hair and voice.

Woodworkers Return to Job

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — The 1,400 members of International Woodworkers of America local 1-85, off the job since last Wednesday at MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. operations, returned to work Monday.

The union meanwhile filed an affadavit asking the Labor Relations Board to reconsider a cease-and-desist order issued Friday.

The dispute began with suspension of five workers Tuesday at the company's Shoemaker Bay sorting grounds. The company would only say the workers were suspended for slowing down the operation there.

REFORESTATION URGED

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The international president of the International Woodworkers of America (IWA) says governments in the Pacific Northwest are not doing their jobs to assure raw material supplies for the future.

Keith Johnson, attending Local 1-424's annual convention, said Saturday that reforestation to maintain sustained yield and preserve jobs is the most important problem facing members of the giant forest union.

He said this was of particular concern in the northwest areas of Canada and the United States.

"These raw materials are essential for the survival of the industry," Johnson said.

The convention was an off-year meeting without election of officers. The only emergency resolution was made by delegates from the Fort Nelson-Fort St. John area calling for continuation of B. C. Railway service to those communities.

Missile Hit Jet

LONDON (AFP) — The South Korean airliner which crash-landed on a frozen lake near Murmansk last week was forced down by a missile fired from a fighter plane on direct orders from Moscow, The Daily Telegraph reports.

A special correspondent, quoting an unidentified senior Norwegian officer attached to NATO, said the missile of an unknown type apparently exploded some distance from the Boeing 707, which was damaged by flying fragments.

The correspondent said the officer drew this conclusion based on observations taken at the time by NATO radar on the Soviet-Norwegian frontier.

Potty Protest By Ulster Inmates

BELFAST (Reuter) — Nearly 300 convicted Irish terrorists have stopped using prison toilets here as part of their campaign for political status, British authorities say.

The authorities say some cells in newly-built blocks at the Maze Prison are already filthy but deny claims that there is a risk of epidemic.

The men have been refusing to wear prison clothes since political status was withdrawn in March, 1976, and live naked except when dressed in prison blankets.

They now are using chamber pots which they refuse to empty themselves.

Big Breast Worshippers Chauvinistic, Dimwitted?

DEAR ABBY: How dare you perpetuate the myth that men prefer women with big breasts? In a recent column in which you offer men tips on how to make themselves more "lovable," you said, "If she's flat-chested and a 38-D walks by, pretend not to notice."

Abby, there are men who prefer women with small breasts ("flat-chested," according to your 38-D standards) — my husband among them. He doesn't have to "pretend not to notice."

If you had done a little research, you would have known that men who prefer women with small breasts are more mature, intelligent and less chauvinistic than the big-breast worshippers.

Please stop trying to make me, and others like me, feel that we are inferior and unattractive, and that any man will slobber himself into a stupor over a 38-D! — Small and Sexy

DEAR S AND S: My apologies. But in most surveys I've seen in which men were asked to describe their "ideal woman," the 38-D's were way out in front.

DEAR ABBY: My grandson, who is 33 and a physician, is quite religious. Every Friday night he serves his two sons, ages 3 and 5, wine with dinner, and they say a prayer.

I wasn't too concerned about this until the 5-year-old visited us and asked if he could have some wine. Of course we didn't give it to him, but I started to worry that the children could be developing a taste for wine at an early age and eventually become alcoholic. I read somewhere that this could happen.

Is there some way I can convey this message to my grandson without offending him? (P.S. He's a Scorpio and doesn't take criticism very well.) — Great-Grandmother

DEAR GRANDMOTHER: Tell him in a loving, non-critical way that his son asked for wine in your home. As a physician he should know the dangers of giving a child too much wine too often. (P.S. Scorpios are also quick-learners.)

DEAR ABBY: I've been going with Adam for two years, and I always thought his family liked me. Adam's brother is getting married next Sunday and Adam will be an usher in the wedding party. I am very upset because I wasn't invited to the wedding. Who does the inviting anyway?

HURT

DEAR HURT: The bride and her family "does the inviting." But the groom and his family are also allowed to invite a certain number of guests.

If Adam had requested it, you probably would have been invited. But it's possible that they had to limit the number of guests, or maybe the ushers were asked to "escort" the bridesmaids, so Adam had a "duty" date. Ask him.

By L. L. COLEMAN, M.D.

With all I read about arthritis and rheumatism, I can't make heads or tails about the difference. I know I have arthritis. Does that mean I also have rheumatism? — Mr. E. McM.

Dear Mr. McM.:

You're not alone in your confusion. Many people use the term interchangeably when, in reality, they are distinctly different.

Rheumatism is a general term which widely describes pain, tenderness and soreness of the muscles, the joints and the ligaments. The American Rheumatism Association lists about 100 different conditions that could be sub-classified under rheumatism.

One of the major subdivisions of rheumatism is arthritis. Arthritis itself has two major divisions. The first, rheumatoid arthritis, refers to chronic inflammation of the joints and the tissues around them. This type of arthritis seems to occur about three times more frequently in women than in men. Salicylate, the basic ingredient in aspirin, is still one of the most effective ways of treating rheumatoid arthritis. Many other drugs have, in recent years, been effective in controlling the pain and discomfort. The research that is accumulating everywhere seems to portend greater hope for the control of this type of arthritis.

The second large classification of arthritis is called "osteoarthritis." This chronic, sometimes incapacitating, condition more often occurs in the older age group and in those who are excessively overweight. Degenerative changes within the joints and hard, knobby enlargement of the joints cause deformities which may interfere with the ease and freedom of movement. The wrists, the spine, the shoulders and the feet are most usualy affected. Here, too, new drugs have been beneficial. Ultrasonic vibrations, massage, mud packs and water therapy can offer relief. Cortisone is, of course, used with great discrimination by the doctor in all forms of arthritis.

Probably the most remarkable strides in surgery have been made in the replacement of joints that are unworkable because of long-standing, chronic, degenerative changes.

There is constant and endless research all over the world that is aimed at learning more about methods of prevention of all forms of arthritis. The horizon of medicine is dotted with heartening evidence that the ever-present painful condition of arthritis may one day be eradicated.
